WOMEN FIGHT IN STRIKE RIOT

Battle Near Mexico City

Two important witnesses against Former Police Lieutenant Charles A. Becker, photographed in court. Above is Harry Vallon and below "Bridgie" Webber, who corroborated the story of "Bald Jack" Rose.

WIDOW TO ACCUSE BECKER

NEW YORK, May 15.—Mrs. Herman Rosenthal will be called by the State as one of the chief witnesses against Police Lieutenant Charles A. Becker for the murder of her husband. It became known today that through her testimony District Attorney Whitman expects to prove the close "business" relations that existed between Becker and Rosenthal, and that her story will be a corroboration of the tale of "Bald Jack" Rose as to the quarrel and break between the two men.

With details of the murder plot before the jury as a result of the testimony of Rose and "Bridgie" Webber, the District Attorney recalled Harry Vallon to the stand today to complete the story that he began late yesterday afternoon.

Vallon showed no trace of nervousness as he was questioned by District Attorney Whitman. His composure was in marked contrast with the nervousness of Webber, who testified yesterday. Vallon showed a trace of weariness at times as he answered the prosecutor's questions, indicating that he regarded his testimony as temporary boredom that he wished to be ended as soon as possible.

TRIP IN MURDER CAR.

In response to questions by Mr. Whitman, Vallon launched into the story of the trip made with Rose to the house of Dora Gilbert, Rosenthal's former wife, for the purpose of getting an affidavit that would hurt Rosenthal. It is the contention of the prosecution that Becker ordered this affidavit to be secured.

From the Gilbert woman's home Vallon and his companions took the first automobile and relayed the party to the "murder car" which collected the gunmen.

"What did you do on the 15th of July?"

"At 5.30 o'clock in the afternoon."

Cottrell Freed In Fatal Shooting of Graham Cox

After all evidence had been presented, Assistant District Attorney Thomas Lavelle today asked for a verdict of not guilty in the case of Willis Cottrell, charged with manslaughter in killing Graham Cox, April 19. The verdict was rendered and Cottrell left the court house a free man. Lavelle said he felt the government had not made out a case.

On April 19, Cox went to his wife's boarding house where Cottrell was rooming, and attacked Cottrell. Cottrell got a revolver from his dresser and shot Cox.

Mrs. Cox was a witness for Cottrell at the trial which has been in progress almost two days. No argument was presented on either side, Cottrell pleaded self defense.

HUERTA'S TROOPS MUTINY

By THOMAS P. COATES.
Special Staff Correspondent of the American.

VERA CRUZ, May 15.—President Huerta's dictatorship is drawing to a stormy and tragic close. Reports received here state that the Federal troops at Piedada barracks, only a short distance from the centre of the city, have mutinied and that the rebels under General Zapata have attacked Huerta at Tlapam, only twelve miles from the National Palace.

These reports indicate that the Dictator may fall even before the Constitutionalists bring their artillery to bear on the capital. In this case there is likely to be complete anarchy in Mexico City, a condition that may result in wholesale murder of foreigners.

Persons arriving here today from Mexico City picture terrible conditions in the capital. Nearly 2,000 wounded soldiers have been taken there from battle fields where the Federals were defeated by the Villa followers. Wounded soldiers were dumped like cattle into freight cars with a little mouldy grass for a bed. They received no medical attention on the way and very little after they had reached here. Physicians are scarce and medical supplies at a low ebb.

TERRIBLE SUFFERING.

Pestered by the heat and the flies after having a corpse for a bed fellow, the wounded troopers suffered untold agonies from thirst and pain, as the freight trains pounded over the rails. Occasionally sudden stops would jar the train from end to end, sending the dead, dying and less seriously wounded rolling into a tangled mass. Shrieks of agony mingled with curses and appeals for water.

Food was lacking as well as water and medical attention, and the pangs of starvation were added to the pain of gunshot wounds.

A report in current in the capital that Jose Lozano, Minister of Public Works, and Querido Moheno, Minister of Commerce, had compiled a list of American property to be blown up. General Huerta is said to have added to it the residences of a number of Americans. The plan to destroy this property was foiled by Eduardo Iturbide, Governor of the Federal district, who objected so strongly that it was abandoned.

General Huerta was said to have suggested the plan while under the influence of brandy.

AMERICAN EXECUTED.

H. A. Heath, a civil engineer, and Alexander McRea, also an engineer, who came through from Mexico on a refugee train, told of an American being taken from the train and executed by Federals.

"Just after the train left the capital, we halted at a way-side station and several Federal soldiers entered our coach," said Heath." They walked through the train until they finally spotted a man whom I knew to be an American, but I did not know his name. They told him he must leave the train and as they bore weapons in their hands it would have been useless to object. The man was searched and questioned, then strung up to a telegraph pole. I afterwards heard that his body was carried back to Mexico City and buried near the north gate."

Carranza May Make Tampico His New Capital

General Carranza is contemplating making Tampico his provisional capital and may order large supplies of arms and ammunitions to be consigned there from the United States. This may be rendered difficult by a blockade of the harbor by the three Mexican gunboats Zaragoza, Vera Cruz and Bravo. The Constitutionalists have plenty of money and there are always daring men to engage in blockade running if the pay is sufficiently large.—From special dispatch by Harry H. Dunn, American correspondent at Vera Cruz.

Japan Now Trying to Swing Russia Against the U. S.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 15.—Japan's intrigue by which she hopes to undermine the United States' relations with Russia seems to be meeting with success. A meeting has been arranged between General Soukomlinoff, the Russian War Minister, and General Fourkashima. This meeting will take place soon at Harbin, Manchuria.

There is no doubt that the purpose of this interview, on Japan's part, is to obtain Russia's neutrality in the event of an attack on the United States which she hopes some day to make.

Police Retirement Bill Again Killed

A move to reconsider the bill for retirement of district police over 65, which was killed yesterday, was defeated today in the House. Representative Carbary of Milford said: "I have seen men sent to quell I. W. W. riots who were not physically fit for service. The present chief is holding office illegally."

Reject Fund for Soldier's Father

The accidental killing of John A. Harrington, member of the militia, by a constable while on duty in the town of Sandwich, was a matter of debate in the House today. A bill to pay his father $200 per year for ten years as compensation was adversely reported by the Committee on Ways and Means. Representative Lydon of Boston said: "The boy was shot because he wore the uniform of the militia."

NORTH ADAMS, May 15.—In sight of his fourteen-year-old bride, with whom he had eloped a week ago, Leroy Hayes, twenty, of Buckland, near here, fired a revolver at his breast and died at a local hospital. Young Hayes had gone out to the home of his bride's parents at Rowe. The parents are said to have objected to the marriage.

POLICE OVERWHELMED BY STRIKERS' RUSH; SHOTS FIRED; 20 HURT

Five hundred men and women strikers and sympathizers attacked 200 loyal operatives of the Heywood Brothers & Wakefield Company in front of the factory on Water street in Wakefield today.

TWO SHOTS ARE FIRED.

Two shots were fired without injury to anyone, so far as known, but a score of the loyal operatives were stoned, clubbed and pummelled with fists. Superintendent R. F. Stout of the cane department was knocked unconscious.

The rioters swept the police aside and chased the operatives through the main streets. Sixty operatives fled into the Town Hall, two blocks from the factory. Finally the rioters were dispersed by the town police, reinforced by a squad of twenty Metropolitan Park police, which was rushed from Revere in automobiles in answer to a call for help from Chief James J. Pollard of the Wakefield force.

OPERATIVES CLUBBED

At 7.15 the strikers and sympathizers were massed opposite the rattan factory gates. A dozen operatives went in, amid murmurs from the crowd opposite. Women clerks and stenographers went in without demonstration by the strikers, but the approach of more operatives started them.

Chief Pollard had seven men with him at the factory, but the strikers swept forward so suddenly that the police were helpless. Picking up sticks and stones from some new building work, the strikers charged across the car tracks and began stoning and clubbing the operatives.

The police battled with all they could get at, but they were hopelessly outnumbered. The bulk of the riot-

SCOTLAND YARD MEN TO WATCH HENRY SIEGEL

PLYMOUTH, Eng., May 18.—The local police today received orders from London to board the Olympic when she arrived here and shadow Henry Siegel, the American banker and merchant, if he leaves the vessel.

This action was taken on the request of authorities in New York, where Siegel is under indictment.

If Siegel attempts to leave England for France, he probably will be arrested. The United States has no extradition treaty with France covering the offenses with which Siegel is charged, and the New York police want him detained here and forced to return to America.

NURSE FILES DEMAND.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Mrs. Marie Vaughn Siegel's application to the Supreme Court for a jury trial of her suit for divorce from Henry Siegel, indicted merchant, will be argued next Tuesday. Siegel slipped away to England on the Olympic last Saturday.

Miss May Smith, a trained nurse of Toronto, Canada, who was named by Mrs. Siegel in her complaint, has filed a demand for a bill of particulars. This motion, made by E. Mortimer Boyle of No. 61 Broadway, is returnable next Monday.

Mrs. Siegel, in her motion for a jury trial, asks these questions:

Whether Siegel, between November 28, 1910, and March 30, 1914, entertained a woman known as Miss Smith at the Hotel Netherland and at his country place, Driftwood?

MENTIONS "MRS. EDDY."

Whether Siegel between these dates entertained a woman known as Mrs. Eddy at Driftwood?

Whether Siegel lived with Miss Smith and Mrs. Eddy at Driftwood?

Whether Siegel entertained a woman unknown to Mrs. Siegel at various places in New York?

Supreme Court Justice Lehman yesterday granted Siegel twenty days to reply to two suits filed against him by Mrs. Siegel, one to recover her dower in certain property and the other to regain possession of wedding presents and other articles which she says were taken from her.

Bankruptcy proceedings against Siegel, begun by Olcott, Gruber, Bonynge & McManus, were postponed yesterday until June 4 by United States Commissioner Gilchrist. If he fails then to appear before the Commissioner, contempt proceedings probably will be brought.

Too Much Tango

The servant problem has been solved by a clause in the will of Mrs. Mary J. Slasion of New York, which gave her servant a trust fund of $5,000 as long as she remained with her husband's family. Mrs. Slasion did not want to see her husband without competent help.

Report Friedmann "Cure" Is Useless

BERLIN, May 15.—Professor Karewski informed the Berlin Medical Society that the conclusions he had reached at the end of a long series of experiments with Dr. F. F. Friedmann's tuberculosis "cure" were as follows:

First—The method is not harmless, though Dr. Karewski had no deaths to report.

Second—It produces no cures. Only one out of fifty-four cases treated revealed any apparent benefit.

Third—The method is in no way preventive.

Fourth—It cannot be described as a means of strengthening a tubercular patient's system.

Fifth—The Friedmann preparation offered for sale is frequently unclean.

Leaping twenty feet to the bottom of a stone quarry in West Somerville, Miss Edith May Hatch, twenty-two years old, of No. 38 Bond street, Winter Hill, an invalid for seven years, ended her life today, after many threats to do so. She died at the Somerville Hospital.

Shortly before seven a. m. she eluded the members of her family, got out of the house and ran to the stone quarry at Jaques and Temple streets in West Somerville. She sprang from the edge of the embankment to the bottom. Her skull was fractured.

Members of her family soon discovered her absence and trailed her to the quarry where they discovered her prostrate body lying on the broken stone below. The police sent the dying girl to the hospital where she expired two hours later.

She had threatened suicide several times and was watched by her family.

RECRUITS ADDED TO BOSTON ARMY FLYING THE FLAG

Many recruits are daily being added to the army of those flying Old Glory during the Mexican War crisis at the suggestion of the AMERICAN.

Miss Ruth Foster, fourteen, of No. 37 Vernon street, Hyde Park, writes the AMERICAN that she has thrown Old Glory to the breeze and will keep it there until the war is over. Other letters follow:

FAMILY OF PATRIOTS.

THOMAS LINCOLN FARRELL and WILLIAM THEODORE FARRELL of No. 1124 Boylston street: "We had both grandfathers in the Civil War. Our grandmother was at Camp Distribution during the Battle of the Wilderness and helped care for the wounded. So you see, we must do what we can to show out patriotism. We will keep our flag up until the boys come home from Mexico."

MRS. CHARLOTTE E. CHRISMAN of No. 154 Saratoga street, East Boston: "Flag and uniform means much to me. My son-in-law, John Mair of Fort Strong, as well as my son, Sergeant Thomas Dunn of Fort Washington, Ind., will fight Mexico in defence of our flag, like my father and my husband fought in the Civil War."

MRS. AURORE LURORE and MRS. LOUIS J. VARNEY of No. 158 Nash road, New Bedford: "We have no flagpole in our home, but as soon as I read the AMERICAN'S suggestion I got one and hung it in our bay window. I got the flag four years ago from the AMERICAN, so it ought to be good. It has been washed many times, but you could not get out these dear old Stars and Stripes if you wore your fingers off. My sister is so proud of the flag that she wears one 11x15 inches long on the front of her hat. We wish everyone would do the same."

RAYMOND SYMONS, twelve, No. 40 Arsenal street, Augusta, Me.: "I have but two flags crossed over my front door, but am sorry to say I have no more to put out."

EDWARD CARLOW, Suncook, N. H.: "I have raised my flag and salute it frequently. God bless its dear old Stars and Stripes."

U. S. WILL HELP JOHN L. RUN HIS ABINGTON FARM

WASHINGTON, May 15. — "John Lawrence Sullivan, farmer, Abington, Mass." is the name and address that now adorns the mailing list of Uncle Sam's Department of Agriculture. Henceforth all manner of farming seed and literature will be sent regularly to the grizzled veteran of the squared circle.

It was through the interest of Congressman Gilmore that the former world's champion was brought in touch with the officials of the department. "John L." wrote to Mr. Gilmore asking for some garden seed. The latter communicated with the department and has been informed that an individual sack of seed had been sent to Sullivan, accompanied by a bale of literature, more or less.

The Bureau of Soils and the Bureau of Plant Industry have become interested in Sullivan's farm at Abington. They have passed the word along to the Weather Bureau also, and "Jawn" is to be kept informed as to the prospect of storms, etc.

Army Aviator and Mechanic Killed

LONDON, May 15.—Another British army officer lost his life in a double aviation fatality today. Lieutenant Empson and his mechanic, named Cudmore, were killed when the aeroplane in which they were making a flight over the Seaton golf course struck a hedge and was overturned. The biplane was descending at the time. Both men were crushed to death.

Hitchcock Has Written a Book, 'It Strikes Home'

By WESLEY HAMER.

Raymond Hitchcock has found sufficient time outside of his arduous (?) duties as star of "The Beauty Shop" to write a book. The title comes to me as "It Strikes Home." This may mean much or it may mean little. Possibly it has a deep and hidden meaning. At all events Mr. Hitchcock promises to send a copy by the first mail and I shall then know something. Eddie (Waistcoat) Dunn says the book has a punch. We shall see.

Mr. Hitchcock's habit of departing from the written lines of "The Beauty Shop" is a matter of nightly confusion to his associates in the cast, who find it hard to get their cues. Last night the cast was all at sea because Hitchcock insisted on directing most of his talk to Willie Collier, who occupied a seat well forward in the orchestra. It was good stuff, however, and the audience liked it immensely.

Shriners' Praise for Hearst Papers

ATLANTA, May 15.—Potentate Forrest Adair of Yaraab Temple, Atlanta, paid high tribute to the work of the Hearst papers during the Shrine convention. Mr. Adair said:

The active, invaluable part taken by the Hearst Atlanta publications—the Georgian and Sunday American—in the Shriners' convention reflects their greatness as newspapers.

The splendid hospitality and civic patriotism of these papers, as revealed in the "Vania" they established for the entertainment of Atlanta's visitors, is something that Atlanta should never forget. It was conceived and executed out of a great spirit.

Militants Burn Cricket Pavilion

LONDON, May 15.—The arson squad of the militant suffragettes today burned the large cricket pavilion of the Oratory School at Edgbaston. Literature attacking Premier Asquith and denouncing the government for not treating Ulster Unionists as suffragettes are being treated was found about the ruins.

Suffrage Marchers Relate Incidents of Great Parade

Huntington Hall was crowded to hear "sprains, bruises and serious impressions of the suffrage parade," given in five-minute addresses by those who took leading parts in it.

Robert Wolff, the Harvard student who organized the college body, said the feature which gave him most pleasure was the way in which college professors turned out.

Miss Francis Van Baalan, who organized and led the New American's League, told of "the horror of Back Bay women" at her taking part.

Miss Agnes Ryan said she did not parade because she was selling the Woman's Journal.

WIDOW OF SLAIN GAMBLER TO TAKE STAND

VALLON UNDER FIRE AT BECKER'S TRIAL

said Vallon, "I went to a Turkish bath where I met Rose and Scheppa, who told me I was to go to Dora Gilbert's and get an affidavit. I got the affidavit and turned it over to Jack Rose. We then drove down town, but at 14th street and Third avenue, the tire blew out. Scheppa telephoned for another car and shortly afterwards Shapiro drove up back to 42nd street and 6th avenue, after we had been up to one hundred and forty-second street and got 'Dago Frank.'

"Who were in the car?"

"Rose, Frank, Scheppa and myself. At Forty-second street and Sixth avenue, Rose and Scheppa, Frank and myself got out of the car. I saw Sam Paul there and went across the street to speak to him. I saw 'Whitey,' 'Gyp' and 'Lefty' there. Then we went up into Bridgie's place and sat at a table.

SEVEN IN CONFERENCE.

"Louie," "Whitey," "Frank," "Gyp," Rose, Webber and myself were at the table."

"What did Webber do?"

"He went out and came back in about fifteen minutes. Then 'Gyp,' 'Whitey,' 'Frank' and 'Lefty' went out. I stayed there about fifteen minutes and then walked out to Sixth avenue and up to Forty-third street and turned in the south side of Forty-third street, going west.

"Where did you stop?"

"I stopped in front of the Elks Club and heard shots. Then I saw the car passing me going west."

"Did you see Scheppa?"

"Yes, he came out to me on the street."

"Did you see Rosenthal's body that night?"

"No."

Describing the night that Rosenthal was to be shot in the Garden restaurant, Vallon said: "Rose met me down in Webber's poker parlor, and said that Becker was complaining that Rosenthal had not been cooked. He said we had better get out and do something.

"We got into a car and picked up 'Lefty Louie,' 'Gyp' and 'Dago Frank,' and went up to a chop suey joint on Seventh avenue. Somebody came in and said that Rosenthal was at the Garden restaurant.

"'Lefty' said: 'We will go up and get him now.' They left, and Rose and I walked up a little later. Rose said he thought he saw a detective across the way, and told 'Louie' to call everything off that night. We went and told Webber of the affair."

VALLON TANGLED.

Mr. Manton then took up his cross-examination, which, like that of previous witnesses, was directed to show that Rosenthal and the underworld accusers of Becker were enemies. Vallon was immediately tangled up.

"Was the reason that you did not see Rosenthal the last few months of his life was because you were unfriendly?"

"We did not talk," Vallon replied.

"Your friendship for Rosenthal ceased about six months before his death, didn't it?"

"Not quite that long."

"Didn't you quarrel with him about six months before he died?"

"We didn't quarrel."

Mr. Manton the nread from Vallon's testimony at the first trial in which he said that he had quarreled with Rosenthal six months before the murder.

Vallon denied he had worked for Webber in the gambling business and dodged efforts to show that an attack in which Webber's jaw was broken by a gangster was the cause of the break between Rosenthal and Webber.

"Had you known the four gunmen some time before the death of Rosenthal?"

MET IN TURKISH BATH.

"No, I first met them in a Turkish bath a few weeks before the murder."

"Did you hear that the Avenue boys accused Rose of framing Zelig?"

"Rose told me."

Mr. Manton asked if Rose had not told Vallon that Rosenthal had charged him with the "frame-up."

"That question is too long for me to answer," said Vallon, but he immediately answered it by saying that Rose had not told him.

"Did you discuss this spat of Rosenthal's on the Sam Paul outing?"

"No."

This was a direct denial of the testimony of the Webber who said Vallon and Rose discussed the "squeal."

Mr. Manton took Vallon back to the Harlem house where Dago Frank was picked up and tried to get some elaborate details as to the events of the evening of July 15. Vallon had hitherto cloaked his ignorance of detail under a friendly "jag" that seemed to shut off all attempts at getting facts.

"Up to the time you got to the poker rooms, you didn't know anybody was to be murdered that night?"

"No."

"Webber was the first man you heard say anything about Rosenthal?"

"Yes."

"Did he get up and go out?"

"Yes."

"When he came back did he announce that Rosenthal was at the Metropole?"

"Yes."

Mr. Manton tangled up Vallon when he asked many questions tending to show that Vallon went to the Metropole in quest of Rosenthal himself, and asked several persons to look in the window and see if Rosenthal was there.

Vallon persistently swore that he had done no such thing despite the mention of half a dozen men by Mr. Manton.

The counsel indicated his later purpose to bring proof that Vallon played a different part in the murder from what he claims.

"Were you standing in front of the Elks Club at the time of the shooting?"

"Yes."

"What brought you around to 43rd street?"

"Curiosity."

"If you know that Rosenthal was going to be shot?"

"I suspected that something 'live' was coming off."

'GHOSTS OF SIX DEAD MEN HOVER OVER BECKER TRIAL"

By DOROTHY DIX.

The curtain has gone up for the second time on that sordid human drama we call the Becker trial. Except that there are new faces in the jury box, that pink-cheeked young Judge Seabury presides in place of frail, ethereal looking Justice Goff, and that tall, iron-gray Mr. Manton in iron-gray clothes has superseded rubicund and temperamental Mr. McIntyre at the defendant's table, one could believe that court had only adjourned over night instead of more than eighteen months having gone by since the gruesome ending of the first trial.

The stage setting for the tragedy is the same. The principals in the cast and the performers are the same. The same lines are being repeated. Much of the audience are the same people, who are hearing over again for the second time the testimony that sent Becker into the shadow of the chair, but the one thing that is noticeably different in the two trials is the atmosphere.

NEW ATMOSPHERE.

The atmosphere at the first trial was one of wonder, of stunned and incredulous amazement, of doubt that such things could be as were being revealed. The atmosphere of the second trial is that of cynical credulity and acceptance.

At the time of the first Becker trial the public was vaguely aware that there was some graft in high places, and that policemen were occasionally found who winked at violations of the law after their palms had been sufficiently well greased. Also we have heard of people being arrested on trumped up charges, and we have read weird stories that we didn't credit of hired assassins who made a trade of murder, but these were dime novel tales of the underworld that the average citizen did not take seriously. Such conditions couldn't exist in the city that is the very flower of civilization of our Western world.

But since the first Becker trial we have grown wiser as to what goes on under the fair and painted outside of our city life. We have seen men broken, disgraced and dying of shame when their nakedness were made public, and it was proven how they had amassed fortunes for violating the very laws they were sworn to protect; we have seen how such men levied their tribute on every form of vice and robbed even the women of the street of their shameful earnings. We have found out that innocent men can be "framed up" and sent to prison for offences they never committed, and that it is as easy to hire a murderer to take a human life as it is to buy a peck of potatoes, and almost as cheap.

Above all, we have found out how much power such a man as Becker has, and how evilly he can use it, and so, while every one was inclined to doubt the story of how Becker conspired to rid himself of his enemy, Rosenthal, when it was originally told, just because it seemed impossible that such a story—a story that smacked of mediaeval times instead of today—could be true, now no one doubts its possibility.

To the general public the stories of Rose, of Vallon, of Webber, are no longer impossibilities. They are probabilities, accepted by all, and in this lies Becker's greatest danger today.

Jack Rose told over again his story of the killing of Rosenthal, and it lost nothing of dramatic value in its repetition. Never was there a stranger figure. In fact or fiction, than this tool of Becker's, who has become the instrument of his destruction.

With his perfectly bald head and his face with neither eyebrows nor eyelashes, with his full, red lips and small, beady dark eyes, he needs only to have a ruff about his neck to look like a Pierrot. Or, with his impassive face that never changes its expression one iota, he looks like some Buddha of the gambling world, but he is like no other human being that you ever saw. He is as emotionless as a stone.

ROSE'S DRAMATIC STORY.

No man ever told on the witness stand a more thrilling story than he did. It was a story of elemental brute passion, of greed, of graft, of blind fury, of revenge, of murder, and yet in the telling of it his expression never altered one particle. Always it was the inscrutable, impassive gambler's face, and his voice matched it. He spoke in monotone that never varied, that had in it no twinge of horror, or anger, or remorse. It was just the cold, bare, unimpassioned recital of damning facts that got on our nerves like the wail of a Greek chorus.

Another curious thing about Rose's testimony was the perfection of his diction. He has had almost no schooling. He was running a gambling house when he was nothing but a lad. He has always lived in the underworld, with associates who have been for the most part illiterate, and yet no college professor has a more fluent vocabulary or a more discriminating use of our mother tongue.

STRANGE PERSONALITY.

He never pauses for a word, and the word he uses is invariably the one that best expresses the exact shade of meaning he wishes to convey. His English is pure and undefiled except when he deliberately uses the slang of the people he is describing to make a point more picturesque, and give the situation the local color.

A strange man, a strange personality, is this man who has been a gambler, a stool-pigeon, a collector of blood money, the very lackey of crime, and who could plan a murder, but not split an infinitive.

They say that he has been the greatest confidence man that New York ever knew. He is still. To hear his story is to believe it, for he either speaks truth, or he is the greatest writer of fiction of our time.

VILLA HURLS 25,000 MEN AGAINST SALTILLO ON WAY TO CAPTURE OF MEXICO CITY

ONE HUNDRED GUNS TO BATTER FEDERAL CITY

TORREON, Mex., May 15.—General Villa's army of 25,000 has opened the assault on Saltillo.

The last train of his conquering army has moved out of Torreon to invest the city whose fall Villa has promised will be followed by that of Mexico City itself.

With the final train went forty-seven field guns and sixty-five machine guns, many of the latest French army fashion which proved so effective in the storming of Tampico.

A large part of Villa's army today was reported close to Saltillo, a city of 25,000 inhabitants, defended by 9,000 Federals.

The wing of Villa's army nearest Saltillo today was said to include 18,000 men with thirty pieces of field artillery and forty machine guns.

Villa's soldiers are said, despite the American embargo, to have about 250 rounds of ammunition per man.

According to one report, Villa's actual attack on Saltillo will begin Saturday night or Sunday morning.

Villa at the Constitutionalist headquarters today said:

"To insure the fall of Mexico City before our arms—which I am told the United States desires—we need more ammunition.

"For that reason I am willing to have a commission ascertain the amount of ammunition we need until Mexico City is taken, with a view to having the embargo lifted on the quantity we require for that purpose."

VERA CRUZ VICTIMS ON SOLACE TELL OF FIGHT
800 MEXICANS FELL

NEW YORK, May 15.—The Mexican loss at Vera Cruz was about 800—200 killed and the others wounded—according to estimates given by the surgeons of the hospital ship Solace, which brought sixty-eight of the American wounded here.

The Vera Cruz snipers used soft-nosed bullets, the surgeons stated.

"There were sixty-five Mexicans killed on the Naval Academy alone, after the Chester turned her five-inch gun on them," said Dr. Will M. Barton of the Solace.

"The captain of the Chester stood beside one of his five-inch guns, and whenever he saw a head show in a window at the academy, he would say to the gun-pointer, 'Get him,' and the gun-pointer would send a shell through that particular window. You never saw such shooting! It was just as if they were using rifles.

DISGUISED AS WOMEN.

"Along toward the end of the second day, our men began to get peevish on account of the sniping, and whenever they saw a suspicious person they fired at him or her first, and asked who it was afterward. Many Mexican snipers disguised themselves in women's clothes.

Many Americans were shot from above, downward wounds drilling through their bodies.

Robert Emmet Lee, eighteen, was the one of the battalion landed by the Vermont on the morning of the occupation. As his shipmates marched in column into the city, the man behind him was John Putnam Kinsman of Boston. They were still on the dock when a bullet struck Kinsman in the thigh, passed through it and lodged in Lee's calf. The thing that disgruntled young Lee most of all was that he had been put out of commission practically before the fighting began.

"The battalion I was with," said Ralph Jane of the Minnesota, "was sent out toward the waterworks on the second day. On our way we came to a thick grove of trees, through which we marched without expecting any harm. All of a sudden firing began from all sides of us, and before the officers had time to get us into extended order and search the thickets, six of our men were dropped."

GOT MYSTERIOUS SNIPER.

An idea of the hatred the Mexicans cherish for Americans was conveyed by the experiences of Basil Burnett, twenty years old, of the South Carolina.

"I was pulling a machine gun along the street," he said, "and among others I was struck by some mysterious sniper we could not trace. Finally, our boys noticed an old man who was walking along the street, carrying a Red Cross flag. He was old and limped, so we hadn't paid any attention to him. We just naturally supposed he was some sort of self-appointed hospital corps. Well, we watched him after a while, and we noticed that every now and then he would disappear and then there would be a number of well-placed shots from hallways, so we grabbed him, and found he has a cora-ing and in a compartment we found 200 cartridges for his revolver. We questioned him and he said he was a veteran of Diaz's wars, and he was proud to be shooting Americans. A firing squad was assigned, and he was stood up against a stone wall."

"Of all the stories told by the men on the place, the one that touched the highest note of individual heroism, is that which described how John F. Schumacher of Brooklyn, a coxswain on the Florida, died. The man who told it, a seaman named Schwartz also of the Florida, had been shot in the right shoulder, but not want his name used, because he said he was hurt so early in the fighting that he really hadn't seen any of it. He was the third American shot in the back.

"There was a fellow in our battalion named Schumacher," said Schwartz, "and he was known in the ship for a great kidder, a fellow with a lot of fun in him, always joshing and making jokes. Well, Schumacher was in charge of a machine gun, and as our boys worked up into the city he kept kidding the others with him, making fun of the Mexicans, and telling the boys not to mind the greasers. Well, first thing you know, he gets a bullet slap in the chest. But that didn't faze Schumacher any. He just laughed, and said it didn't hurt. He was sweeping the street with his gun then, and he kept at it, kidding the boys around him. Then he got a bullet in the eye, and that laid him low. But it was an hour and a half before he died, and all that while he tried to kid the boys around him. The last thing he said, he whispered something about 'them greasers do grease their bullets, boys, don't they?'"

Huerta Envoy Rodriguez, speaking in the name of his colleagues, is quoted saying:

"We have full power to act; we carry no formula and we shall decide according to our consciences, always bearing in mind the national honor."

The right of the United States to retain temporary possession of Vera Cruz will be contested before the mediators by the Mexicans, probably not with any hope that they can maintain such a position, but with the intention of prolonging an argument and complicating the issues before the mediators.

BOSTON WILL BE NEW SUPPLY DEPOT FOR THE U. S. ARMY

It is the intension of the government to make Boston and New York the two depots from which supplies will be shipped to Galveston or to Mexico for use of the army.

There are in reserve in New England, 29,000,000 rounds of ammunition, while a large quantity is at the powder magazines in Bingham. Most of this ammunition may be taken to Galveston, where it will be ready for emergencies.

Most of the supplies will be taken to Galveston in the Minnesotan and Panaman, now at New York.

MAYO'S SHIPS IN "WATCHFUL PURSUIT" OF HUERTA'S FLEET

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Rear-Admiral Mayo's ships—the cruiser Tacoma and the destroyers Warrington and Henley—were today reported in "watchful pursuit" of Huerta's Tampico fleet.

It is believed the Mexican gunboats are massing for Tuxpam, about 100 miles away, to discharge soldiers taken aboard just before Tampico was evacuated. With renewed ammunition and supplies, the little vessels may return and attempt a blockade at Tampico against Constitutionalist munitions of war, it is believed.

Admiral Mayo did not explain the departure of the American vessels, but it was assumed they were under orders to observe the movements of the warboats.

SHOOTING OF PARKS MAY HAVE BEEN CAUSE OF RECALLING MAAS

VERA CRUZ, May 15.—Jose Manuel Cardozo de Oliveira, Brazilian Minister to Mexico, has protested to General Huerta's government against the execution by the troops of Private Samuel Parks, the American infantryman who disappeared from the lines at Vera Cruz, according to passengers who arrived here from the capital.

No formal admission of any irregularity in regard to the death of Parks was made, but among the Mexican military men at Cordoba there is gossip that the shooting had much to do with the substitution of General Gustavo Maas by General Garcia Pena, with General Rubio Navarete in charge of the field operations.

Consul Canada is disturbed over the detention of a Cuban messenger who was sent out to General Maas' lines with a letter urging the release of Admiral Fletcher's Filipino servant who wandered out into Mexican territory and has been held by the Federals for more than a week. The Cuban has been gone four days and is held by the Federals.

WALSH AIDS MOTHER IN SEEKING NEWS OF ANDOVER BOY'S DEATH

Governor Walsh today wired the War Department for information regarding the reported death in Vera Cruz of Private Maurice Welch of Company A, Nineteenth Infantry, whose home is in Andover.

Impetus for the investigation was given by Mrs. Mary A. Welch of No. 74 Summer street, Andover, who wired the Governor asking him to find out about the reported death and as to whether the young man's body could be shipped to her. Mrs. Welch is the widow whose son had met death by falling from a building in Vera Cruz.

2 LYNN MEN ON TROLLEY STONED BY MOB IN MEXICO

Charles Dupar of No. 74 Church street and George P. Strong of No. 35 Groveland street, Lynn, salesmen for a Lynn firm, have returned to that city after a thrilling escape from Mexico.

The young men were living in Santo Marie, a suburb of Mexico City, about twenty miles by trolley from the plaza. One night after the marines had landed they were on a trolley car that was stoned and they were forced to leave the car.

With the assistance of the British legation they reached refugee train where 800 Americans, mostly women, were being conveyed to Vera Cruz.

They travelled two days without food before reaching Puerto Mexico. At Cordova, Federal troops threatened to shoot them if the American ships entered the harbor.

DEDHAM MAN'S STORE IN MEXICO LOOTED THRICE IN TWO DAYS

"On two successive days my place of business at Monterey, Mexico, was attacked by the Federals and Constitutionalists and later looted by the Mayor of a neighboring town," declares Frank D. Chace of Dedham, who left Mexico as a refugee. Mr. Chace is now at his home on Common street, Dedham.

"The first outbreak of any kind took place on April 20, when a troop of Federal soldiers appeared outside the wall surrounding the plant and threatened to destroy it with cannon. This threat was not carried out.

A SIMPLE WAY TO REMOVE DANDRUFF

Prevent Falling Hair and End Itching Scalp.

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you value your hair, you should get rid of dandruff at once, for nothing destroys the hair so quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everybody notices it.

MEXICAN ENVOYS DELAY A-B-C CONFERENCE

SESSIONS PUT OFF TO MAY 20

WASHINGTON, May 16.—At the request of the Mexican envoys to the mediation conference, it was announced at the State Department today that the beginning of the mediation sessions at Niagara Falls have been postponed from May 18 to May 20.

The South American mediators were formally received at the White House today.

The reception was in nature of a farewell to the three diplomats who are going to Niagara Falls in an effort to adjust the differences between the United States and Mexico.

Secretary of State Bryan was present. The diplomats were received with all the formalities attendant upon the usual international functions, naval and military aides being present in full dress uniform.

President Wilson expressed the wish that the efforts of the mediators would be successful and bade them a most cordial farewell.

Washington representatives of General Carranza who are acquainted with two of Huerta's commissioners, say that while both are very able men, they are typical pettifogging lawyers, who have all the adroitness of the Latins in procrastinating and provoking disputes over non-essentials for the purpose of gaining time.

The protest of Huerta over the occupancy by the United States of Lobos Island is held to have been primarily with the object of laying a foundation for a lengthy discussion of the armistice and the way it has been observed by the United States and by Huerta, and in order to evade the Tampico incident.

It is predicted that the Huertistas, having complained of the seizure of the Lobos Lighthouse, will bring the incident to the attention of the mediators and endeavor to spend several days in a controversy over the merits of this issue.

They will endeavor to magnify the importance of the action of Lieutenant Commander Jeffers in taking possession of the Lobos Island Light in order to set up their claim to reparation.

The Mexican commissioners, in the opinion of those well informed on international law, will build their case in chief against the United States upon the occupation of Vera Cruz.

It is predicted that the first proposal submitted to the mediators will be that the United States withdraw is military force from Vera Cruz and restore that port to Huerta.

REBELS COLLECT BIG RANSOM AT TAMPICO

By CHARLES MICHELSON.

VERA CRUZ, May 15.—Tampico is comparatively orderly. Shooting has ceased. The Constitutionalists have extinguished the fires and looting is being rather systematically done.

The city resembles a big mining camp, as the merchants and others, realizing days ago what was coming, buried their treasures. The Constitutionalists are working with pick and shovel, or making the owners dig for them.

The loot is rather a disappointment, as the Federals had the first chance. Zaragosa ordered the merchants to raise one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, making up in merchandise what they lacked in cash. The order was liberally interpreted by those making the collection.

REPAIR OIL WELLS.

Compared with the American occupation of Vera Cruz, the taking of Tampico was a horror, but compared with the sacking of the city in the early days of this revolution it was the mildest sort of warfare.

The presence of Rear Admiral Mayo in the Panuco River right in front of the city with the Des Moines and Dolphin is responsible to a great extent for the moderation of the conquestadores.

With the evacuation of the Federals the oil wells were neglected. They are flowing into the river. Oil men were of the opinion that the bigger wells would burst out if they were not attended to and asked to be allowed to do what was necessary.

General Gonzales gave a satisfactory reply and the oil men will land today.

Consul Miller is again occupying the American consulate. He has been ashore several days, but until now under British protection.

TAMPICO NEW CAPITAL.

The Constitutionalists are anxious to make a good impression, hoping for American recognition. Villa's instructions to avoid excesses give a semblance to military law.

Rebels say Carranza is considering making Tampico the temporary Rebel capital in the hope of getting arms and ammunition which he cannot get at Juarez. The bayous and lagoons will make it difficult to enforce a blockade. The Rebels have plenty of money to pay for smuggling and plenty of coast line where pilots can take risks.

The first ship to clear through the Rebel custom house probably will be Ypiranga which is expected from Galveston. This is the boat whose cargo of war munitions caused the action at Vera Cruz. The German consul inquired of Admiral Mayo and the Rebel commander whether they would permit the discharge of a general cargo.

Mayo was interviewed by the captains of the Zaragoza and Bravo in relation to movements of the gunboats. They do not like the proposition of an escort of American warships wherever they move.

INTERNE GUNBOATS.

They were told it would be satisfactory if the gunboats were interned at Vera Cruz, leaving their ammunition and breech blocks in the fort there until it was decided what the results of the peace negotiations at Niagara Falls would be. Not liking this, they asked the opportunity of communicating with Mexico City.

MELLEN WILL TELL ALL, SPARING NEITHER LIVING NOR DEAD

"He means to hit back, and takes a savage, sardonic delight in the prospect. He means to shoot right and left, sparing no one, living or dead."—From B. C. Forbes' article on his interview with Mellen.

"After I get through, there will be no feathers sticking to my claws. I am determined that I shall not be held responsible for things for which I was not responsible."—From statement by Mellen himself.

MELLEN TO TELL ALL WHEN HE RESUMES HIS NEW HAVEN STORY

By B. C. FORBES.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—"Before I get through I'll show them there are no feathers sticking to my claws," Mr. Mellen said to me triumphantly as he stepped off the witness stand at the New Haven hearing before Interstate Commerce Commissioner McChord.

"There are many things I do not want to tell," continued Mr. Mellen, "but I am determined that I shall not be held responsible for things for which I was not responsible."

"How do you feel after the ordeal?" I asked. He rebuked me.

"This is no ordeal," he almost snapped. "I am willing to tell all. I want to tell all."

Then why haven't you spoken before now?" I queried.

"Because of the indictment hanging over me. My counsel wouldn't let me talk."

He referred to the Grand Trunk prosecution which still impends and about which he handed the newspapers long typewritten statements before the proceedings, which did not touch the Grand Trunk, began.

"I have nothing to conceal," Mr. Mellen emphasized. "Nothing."

So, gentlemen, the New Haven hid is to be ripped off by ex-President Charles S. Mellen, the one time servant of high finance who, discarded and scorned, could well say, as did another too faithful servitor of a bygone day.

"Had I but served my God with half the zeal I served my king He would not in mine old age have left me naked to my enemies."

Mellen is to hit back—and apparently takes a certain savage, sardonic delight in the prospect.

MAY HIT TAMMANY.

He means to shoot right and left, sparing no one, dead or living. Some of his shot will be fired in the direction of Tammany Hall and New York Aldermen, although the late J. P. Morgan and certain financiers not dead will not escape bullets for which they are the rightful billets.

So completely was Mellen under the domination of Morgan, even before leaving the Northern Pacific presidency, that the financier simply told him: "I'm going to make you president of the New Haven."

And Mellen was elected—and started work without knowing even what salary he was to receive. The generous Morgan made it $50,000 a year as a starter. Later he raised it to $60,000 (although, parenthetically, Mellen, since his eviction, is quoted as having declared that no man is worth more than $25,000 a year.)

"HELPING COMMISSION."

Mellen's present occupation is "helping the Interstate Commerce Commission," he testified whimsically, the moment the commission's counsel, Joseph W. Folk, began questioning him. Later Mr. Mellen repented of this levity and scolded himself for it. "I am now engaged in no business," he said. And truth to tell he seems heartily glad of it.

His first definition, however, is full of significance, don't you think? "Helping the Interstate Commerce Commission." Yes, Mr. Mellen evidently intends to apply himself to that task with all the ardor he infused into nurturing the New England transportation monopoly begun under his predecessors, and since run to seed, ruining 22,000 stockholders—those "widows and orphans" who were supposed to be the special divinely-ordained care of Mr. Morgan, William Rockefeller and other millionaire directors.

His multiplied troubles, coupled with his sixty-three years, have sapped the once fiery Mellen of some of his wiry and snap and electricity. As he took his seat alongside Commissioner McChord on an improvised bench, Folk and all others, mostly reporters, occupying floor seats, he looked worn and sort of sad, yet wore a determined demeanor. He was the least flustered in the room.

TELLS TALE OF CRAFT.

There he sat—calm, grim, never flinching at the cameras pointed at him like cannon, and click, click, clicking. I really think he posed, consciously or unconsciously, for the picture taking before his examination became serious.

The little hair he has left is now white, his eyes are duller than of yore and his complexion is sallow, but he still retains a flabby double chin.

Ten minutes after starting he was in the thick of an amazing tale of graft, of long lists of thousands of dollars over to East Side-looking gentry, who represented, he presumed, persons of "influence" in New York who were able to have the Boston & Westchester charter amended in thirteen particulars "entirely to my satisfaction."

The go-between in this deal—the "fence," as Mr. Mellen called him—was ex-Police Inspector Thomas F. Byrnes, long the Czar of New York police. The whole deal entailed $1,250,000, of which Mr. Mellen paid $150,000 to mysterious gentlemen with red noses who were identified to him merely by "personal due Bills" given to Byrnes by Mellen and afterward returned to be "cashed."

"Some $50,000 of these bills remain, to be paid—worse luck," said Mr Mellen. "for if I could have gotten hold of these five due bills there would have been no present nor any hereafter about those subjects."

The $1,250,000 of good New Haven capital was paid for Westchester stock "worth about ten cents a pound," according to Mellen's "own appraisal."

"That $1,250,000 was for the purpose of corruption?" demanded Folk.

"Absolutely no. It represented one share of New Haven stock for three shares of the Westchester and the franchise amended in thirteen particulars." So Mellen quibbled.

Mr. Mellen will again take the stand next Tuesday fortified with papers. He now seems eager to tear aside the veil from the inner workings of the New Haven looting, no matter in what light he places his own activities. These were not always above reproach, inferentially, for here is one sentence from his testimony:

"I always make it a practice with papers of that kind (regarding the Westchester graft) to tear them up in small pieces and throw them in the closet."

Tuesday may bring sensational disclosures little to the liking of the New Haven higher-ups.

What does the old proverb say? "When thieves fall out, honest men get their due."

F. L.—Attorney-General McReynolds realizes that the gag jig is up and of. The AMERICAN and other newspapers' publicity killed that plot.

STORY OF BALD GRAFT IN WESTCHESTER DEAL

The amazing story told by Charles S. Mellen before the Commerce Commission is a story of intricate manipulation and "influence" and plain, bald graft.

Put in simple language, this is what Mr. Mellen said happened:

The New Haven road wanted the Westchester property.

The Westchester franchises did not suit the New Haven road's ideas.

Therefore, Mr. Mellen set out to have the franchises changed, and then to purchase the road.

A go-between representing the Westchester stockholders in control came to Mr. Mellen, and this arrangement was entered into.

The New Haven would pay one share of New Haven stock for every three shares of Westchester stock; but FIRST, the Westchester people must persuade New York officials to alter the road's franchise to suit the New Haven.

Until the Westchester franchise was changed, the New Haven paid nothing. After it was changed, the New Haven paid $1,250,000 in stock and cash for the Westchester stock.

Mellen said this Westchester stock was worth "ten cents a pound." Therefore, obviously the $1,250,000 payment was made for the purpose of changing the franchise to suit the New Haven.

The payments were all to persons unknown to Mr. Mellen; no names were used, no papers were signed, and the transaction was completely "covered up."

MELLEN'S STORY.

The features of the story told by Mr. Mellen on the witness stand were as follows:

1. The Board of Directors of the New York, New Haven and Hartford set aside $3,000 shares of its stock, representing $1,200,000, for the purpose of obtaining modifications to the franchise of the New York, Westchester and Boston Railway Company.

2. The power to grant these "modifications" and certain concessions demanded by the New Haven was vested in the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and the Board of Aldermen of New York City during the years 1908 and 1909.

3. Inspector Thomas J. Byrnes (deceased), famous for many years as the head of the New York Police Department, agreed to obtain thirteen different "amendments" to the Westchester charter from the city officials and was given stock or the cash equivalent of $1,250,000 for distribution among persons whose identity Mr. Mellen declared he did not know.

4. Some of these persons accepted New Haven stock made out in the names of "dummies," but the majority of them demanded cash and received it for their services, the exact character of which Mr. Mellen declares he does not know.

GAVE "DUE BILLS."

5. Mr. Mellen gave "due bills" for various amounts which were distributed by Mr. Byrnes to persons identified by Mr. Mellen as "people of what you call influence" and "consequence to do work for the Westchester who placed them where they would do the most good."

6. Mr. Mellen personally redeemed some of these "due bills," paying the holders of them in cash because of their aversion to checks, drafts or other forms of negotiable securities.

7. As late as March 6 of the present year Mr. Mellen personally paid in the corridor of the Vanderbilt Hotel in New York City $10,400 in currency to a man "who looked like an east sider," and who presented a "due bill" calling for that amount.

8. Mr. Mellen declared that in not a single instance could he recall the names of any of the men to whom he made these payments.

$50,000 UNCALLED FOR.

9. There still remains in the hands of Mr. Mellen $50,000 to redeem outstanding "due bills" calling for that amount.

10. The former president of the New Haven disclaimed any personal knowledge of the officials or politicians with whom Inspector Byrnes did business. He said that he made it a business not to know, but frankly admitted that he was willing to do business with "any person—the Devil if necessary—to get what I wanted."

11. Mr. Mellen made it a practice to destroy all memoranda relating to deals of the kind described by him as having occurred between himself and Mr. Byrnes as soon as the deals had been accomplished.

12. He testified that he had been brought to the New Haven as its president at by the late J. P. Morgan, who fixed his salary at $50,000 a year, to whom he always felt the greatest responsibility for his acts as president; also that he operated directly under the board of directors of the road.

FOLK TO DIG INTO NEW HAVEN SLUSH FUND

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Campaign contributions constitute the next New Haven tangle which Solicitor Folk and the Interstate Commerce Commission will attempt to unravel. Mr. Folk today announced that he is going to the bottom of the political situation in New England at the time the N. Y., N. H. & H. RR. was most active in making political friends.

Aside from the $1,200,000 slush fund which the New Haven raised to give aid and comfort to judges, police officials and aldermen who fit in believed were in a position to grease the ways for the launching of the Westchester enterprise, an operation which involved thirteen franchise amendments, the railroad also donated freely to campaign funds.

There seems to be a strong likelihood that the New Haven investigators will run into the same snag that temporarily halted the Pujo money trust investigating committee of the House when it subpoenaed William Rockefeller. Folk announced today that Mr. Rockefeller, who is Maying on Jekyll Island, off the coast of Georgia, has accepted service of the subpoena issued by him, but has forwarded to the commission a physician's certificate saying that he is in such poor physical condition that a journey to Washington would be a perilous proceeding. Governor Folk admitted that it is probable that an examiner of the commission may be sent to Jekyll Island to take a deposition from Mr. Rockefeller.

MILLER SICK, TOO.

George MacCullough Miller, another New Haven director of New York city, also has sent Governor Folk a physician's certificate of ill health to add to his collection. Mr. Miller is in the metropolis, but his physician certifies that a trip to Washington would be an unsafe undertaking for the man so Mr. Miller, at this time. A deposition may be taken from him also. George

BOSTON AMERICAN

MARCONI SAYS OVERSEA PHONE IS SOON DUE

LONDON, May 15.—William Marconi has given interesting details regarding the wireless telephone experiments which he has been and still is conducting. Afterward Marconi left London for his residence, Eaglehurst, Fawley, near Southampton, to superintend personally further experiments which he and his staff are going to make between the Marconi stations at Southampton, Carnarvon and certain mercantile vessels whose ordinary wireless apparatus has been equipped with telephonic transmitters.

Marconi explained that his message to the American Company announcing that he had completed his wireless telephone tests and brought out a practical design of wireless telephone apparatus based on a principle which has never before been used in this sort of work referred to what he has done on the Mediterranean, He added:

"We have now got an apparatus with which we can telephone a distance of 100 miles. Some further tests are to be made between ships and shore stations in South England and Wales. So far the greatest distance over which we have spoken successfully was thirty-three miles. That was between Italian battleships on the Mediterranean about six weeks ago. We have completed an apparatus for 100 miles at least, but we have not finished testing it yet.

"Our method of communication is just the same as with wireless telegraphy, except that instead of sending wireless telegraphic messages we send over the intervening space wireless words. The new principle involved is that we have a new way of producing what are called continuous waves.

"I think we shall be able presently to telephone wirelessly from England to America. It may be a question of years—I do not know how soon, but I think it will come. Our chief difficulty is in controlling sufficient power to carry a message that distance."

Tried to Stop Dog Fight; Shot; Woman Also Hit

CHICAGO, May 15.—Because he attempted to protect two our dogs from the attack of a brindle bull terrier, Alexander Aiello was twice shot in the neck and Mrs. Donato Rubeticco was shot in the back and is not expected to live. An unidentified man was the assailant.

Aiello says the man who did the shooting led a bulldog down the alley behind Aiello's house at No. 177 De Koven street. Here the dog attacked two little yellow dogs who yelped piteously. Aiello remonstrated, and the man cursed him. When Aiello picked up a club and started toward the man he pulled a revolver and shot twice, hitting Aiello in the neck.

The stranger shot a third time just as Mrs. Rubeticco came out of the back entrance of No. 1109 De Koven street.

MILITANTS THROW THINGS AT THE JUDGE

LONDON, May 15.—Mrs. Dacre Fox and Mrs. ("General") Flora Drummond, the two militant suffragettes, who camped upon the door steps of the homes of Lord Lansdowne and Sir Edward Carson, were arraigned in Westminster Court today and sentenced to undergo a month's imprisonment or post a peace bond of $500. Both women chose the jail sentence, but declared that they would go on hunger strikes.

The hearing was marked by scenes of great disorder, which halted it time and again. Both women continually shouted interruptions and at times joined together in screaming, "Give women justice," and "Votes for women."

Once Mrs. Drummond, who is a woman of powerful psique, snatched a bundle of papers from the hands of the prosecutor and hurled them at the judge.

In the meantime twenty other militants, wearing sashes and carrying huge banners, were trying to fight their way into the court room, but were turned back by the police. They contented themselves with marching up and down before the court screaming imprecations against the Judge and the government.

'WOMEN SMIRK BECAUSE BOOKS TEACH THEM TO'

NEW YORK, May 15.—"Why do men strut and women smirk? Because all text books teach us these are sex peculiarities.

"In story books we read how the little boys always win the race. The girls, however, are winning now. In the future the one who can run the fastest will win the race, irrespective of sex."

These illustrations were used by Mrs. Charles A. Beard, wife of Professor Beard of Columbia University, presiding at a meeting of the Feminist Forum in Columbia University, to emphasize the necessity, she said, of using the term "feminism" as opposed by Professor Kirchway in addressing the forum.

"I want to explain to you why we feminists use the term 'feminist.' It is necessary," said Mrs. Beard.

"The right of men have nothing to do with the rights of women. We cannot have humanism until we have feminism."

Struck by Flier; Slightly Scratched

CHICAGO, May 15.—Picked up by the pilot of the engine drawing the New Orleans special on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad, Vanjoy Ditter of No. 154 West One Hundred and Nineteenth street was carried twenty-five feet and hurled into a ditch. He escaped with slight cuts on his face and head.

No Need Being Old or Wrinkled Before 75

Lillian Russell says any woman who has wrinkles before she's 75 is herself responsible for them. Sunshine and fresh air she considers more valuable as complexion preservers than nostrums and cosmetics.

The chief objection to cosmetics is that at best they only temporarily cover up defects. There are certain true aids to Nature, which may be applied with directly opposite effect. Ordinary unmodified wax, for instance, actually removes a bad or sallow complexion, by gradually, almost imperceptibly, peeling off the worn out scarf skin. Just one ounce, procurable at any druggists, will soon unveil an entirely new and natural complexion, with an enjoyable girlish color. Of course, cutaneous blemishes, like pimples, freckles, fine lines, moth patches, liver spots, disappear with the discarded skin.

To prevent or remove wrinkles, a face bath which also produces natural results, is made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This is inexpensive, effective and gives no trouble. Adv.

PUT SULPHUR ON AN ITCHING SKIN AND END ECZEMA

Says This Old-Time Eczema Remedy Is Applied Like Cold Cream.

Any irritation or breaking out on the face, arms, legs or body when accompanied by itching, or when the skin is dry and feverish, can be readily overcome by applying a little bold-sulphur cream, says a noted dermatologist.

He states that bold-sulphur instantly allays the angry itching and irritation and soothes and heals the Eczema right up, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Bold-sulphur has occupied a secure position for many years in the treatment of cutaneous disorders because of its parasite-destroying property. Nothing has ever been found to take its place in treating the irritable and inflammatory skin affections. While not always establishing a permanent cure it never fails to subdue the itching irritation and drive the Eczema away and it is often years later before any eruption again appears on the skin.

Those troubled should obtain at any pharmacy an ounce of bold-sulphur cream which is applied to the affected parts in the same manner as an ordinary cold cream.

This is published for Walter Luther Dodge Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

A New Kind of Men's Straw Hat Season Opens at Filene's Tomorrow

Any Store Can Sell Some Kind of a Straw Hat at $2

But these are the Famed Lincoln-Bennetts {Made in London}

Why Pay More Than $2 for a Straw Hat this Spring? Why Not Buy TWO of these NOW for the entire Summer?

Never, at a season's opening, have we seen such value crowded into $2 straw hats as these London-made hats possess—nothing even approaching it. This applies to workmanship, style, variety.

Of course we have higher priced hats on sale—American and London made—but we may as well be candid and say that it is impossible to put as much relative value into them as in these Lincoln-Bennett straws at TWO DOLLARS.

Their makers are the world's greatest producers of men's hats. They are hatters to the King of England and nobility. We represent them in Greater Boston.

Styles of sennit straws this year run to higher crowns and narrower brims; bows on side or back.

Filene LINCOLN-BENNETT (London) hats are all in white straw and black bands. $2, $3, $4.

Filene American straw hats are in colored as well as white straws, fancy or plain bands. $3, $4, $5.

UNIFORMS FOR POLICEWOMEN, PERHAPS CLUBS

"Policewomen might well wear a uniform and carry clubs," declared Mrs. Thomas H. Tyler, well known in Boston reform work, who has been urged as Boston's first policewoman under the new law, a position which she declared today she was not likely to accept.

"There are many young folks on the street who respect a badge or a uniform more than they do moral suasion," she continued.

"The uniform idea is most excellent, for it makes the policewoman conspicuous enough on the streets to enable strangers to locate her without difficulty.

"To the woman officers would fall the task, in a large measure, of enforcing the laws so far as they relate to the feminine part of the population.

"I believe the work of caring for the boys and girls on the streets can be done in a much more effective manner when it is carried on by women police. There are many children of fourteen or fifteen years on the streets nightly who need the care of just such women. They would pay no attention to the words of persons without a badge or uniform, but when they see the insignia of office they are respectful at once and leave for their homes.

"The work of the policewoman could be accomplished in hearty cooperation with the men police of the city. There is no reason why her work should be any more distasteful than that of the average worker among the woman of the town. She has a well-defined duty to perform, and will have the backing of the law."

PAUL SWAN "MOST BEAUTIFUL MAN" TO DANCE IN BOSTON

It will be a rare treat for Bostonians to witness the much discussed dancing of Paul Swan, whom New York has been hailing the past season as the American successor to Mordkin and as "the most beautiful man in the world." Mr. G. Hepburn Wilson has specially engaged him to contribute to the program of his dancing carnival and modern dance revue which he is personally conducting in Mechanics Building tomorrow afternoon and evening.

Mr. Swan's first appearance will be a Greek phantasy, the "Dance of the Hours," from "La Gioconda," and the Sphinx dance. Mr. Swan is said to imbue his Sphinx dance with all the passion, poetry, mystery and sensuousness of Egypt and the Nile.

Other dancing features will be Mr. Wilson, assisted by Miss Helen Martin, in the Argentina tango, the one-step and the hesitation waltz, who will make some remarks of interest and explanation regarding the modern dances. The Brazilian maxixe will be done by John A. Ross and Miss Irene Hayes, instructors from Mr. Wilson's New York studios.

ALL MAY DANCE.

A very inviting feature, both in the afternoon and evening, will be the opportunity afforded to all present to join in dancing with their friends and with the dancers from Mr. Wilson's studios, for a few hours of pleasure and instruction, without extra charge.

The music will be by the band of the Columbia Graphophone Company, which makes all the band records for the Columbia people.

Mr. Swan said today in an interview:

"I am at heart nothing but a ploughboy. I came from a farm in Nebraska. I ran away to go to school. I really am thoroughly self-made and have earned my way through varying vicissitudes since childhood. I slept in a basement doorway on Broadway because I had not the money for a night's lodging.

"When I went to Greece, I had a different feeling from anything I have ever experienced before or since. I felt a complete realization of my being indigenous to that soil.

IN LOVE WITH GREECE.

"The scenes, the people, the air I breather were wholly familiar. I had come into my own. After many silent centuries Greece had drawn me back again to her warm bosom. Although I loved Egypt and found many enthusiasms in the spirit of art and beauty in the Old World, no other country had this effect upon me.

"I have no illusions left regarding fame, or ambition, or greatness, or perfect happiness. The best that any of us can do is to express ourselves and our ideals through the medium which is most natural to us.

"I used to say that painting was the 'perspiration of the soul,' but that expression was a little offensive, as is the naturalness of Walt Whitman; and so, perhaps, we can best word it that our paintings are the 'exhalations of the soul.' I just paint to get it out of my system, and

"Child's Hug Made Me Kidnap Him," Mother Explains

CHICAGO, May 15.—"I just saw him there and he hugged me. Before I knew why I did it, I grabbed him up and ran away. I didn't mean to kidnap my boy. I only wanted what belonged to me."

Mrs. Weildman Walling of No. 11 East Grand street sat in her cell in the Maxwell street station before her arraignment today trying hard to keep back tears as she told of her love for little six-year-old Fritz Matzat. Through a divorce four years ago, she had been deprived of the boy and Saturday while on a weekly visit to the boy she kidnaped him.

The father and divorced husband, Ferdinand Matzat, No. 520 Dekoven street, complained to the police and both Mrs. Walling and her second husband, Louis Walling, a salesman, were arrested.

HUB SISTERS HEIR TO JEWELS OF NORDICA

Mrs W F Baldwin and Mrs Ione A. Walker of No 39 Columbia road Dorchester, sisters of Lillian Nordica, the soprano, who died at Batavia, Java, recently, are today believed to be heirs to a part of the $1,000,000 collection of Nordica jewels.

Mrs Baldwin and Mrs Walker said today they expect the body will leave Java Monday and reach New York about June 20.

It is believed the singer had with her at the time of her death nearly all of her jewels.

The most notable of the jewels are a string of pearls and a collection of emeralds. One string of colored pearls is valued at $100,000. Her matched emeralds, which included a necklace with seven large, matched stones and two large emeralds in earrings, are said to be worth a similar sum. The pearls are pear-shaped and flawless.

Equally valuable are said to be her string of matched white pearls five lengths deep and a very long string of pearls, which she wore with magnificent corsage ornaments of diamonds and black pearls. The black pearls were valued at $15,000.

Her diamond collar of eighteen strands fringed with large blue-white diamonds, is thought to be most valuable of all.

NO. 14

ATTENTION, MAYOR CURLEY!

If you had made as good a contract for the people of Boston with the Electric Light Company as Jersey City, New Jersey, made with its Electric Light Company, Boston would save about one million, thirteen thousand dollars during the period of the contract which you wish to foist upon Boston. This great sum saved by the city would give more than ONE THOUSAND THREE HUNDRED AND FIFTY WORKMEN A FULL YEAR'S EMPLOYMENT.

Would you have been elected Mayor, Mr. Curley, if you had told the people of Boston that you considered the 12 per cent. dividends of the Edison Electric Light Company more sacred than the bread and butter of the clerks, the laborers, the police, the firemen, the nurses, the matrons employed by the city, whom you have reduced or discharged, or more sacred than the pleasure and health which the citizens obtain from their parks and public buildings which your FALSE economy tends to cripple?

HOPE TO USE BROCKTON APRIL FOOL LICENSE

BROCKTON, May 15.—There is to be no repetition of the scenes at the city hall on April Fool day, when a well-known minister and a couple of ushers were arrested for creating a disturbance at the marriage between a "James Sanderson" and a "Miss Smith."

It appears all were engaged with more than ordinary interest in the proceedings, all took the joke good naturedly, and have let the unfortunate associates of the occasion off with one of the severe scoldings they richly deserved.

The Reverend J Stanley Durkee received a letter from Miss Smith of Boston soon after the "April Fool" episode in which she expressed her willingness to use the certificate if Sanderson could be found.

Today the one minister has a second letter, postmarked East Boston. The writer, whose name Mr Durkee withholds, describes himself as a Westerner, twenty-four years old who has been in the last two months "seeking a life partner."

So Mr Durkee expects to correspond with the boy in East Smith and the young Westerner can be brought together and the marriage certificate used.

NEAR RIOT AS I. W. W. LEADERS RAP HAGGERTY

A riot was narrowly averted at an open air I. W. W. meeting [illegible] square, Quincy, when several men took offense at the remarks of the speakers, who catechized Corporation Counsel A. Haggerty as the representative of the capitalistic class for whom he was fighting. Joseph J. Ettor was taunted from all sides and he finally shouted:

"You rowdies have evidently come here looking for trouble. Now, if there is any killing, by God we will know on whose heads to place the blood!" At this sympathizers of Ettor started toward that part of the crowd where the comments were made, but Ettor quickly called them back. The trouble ended when Ettor told a policeman he had a permit to speak and Patrolman Olson then stepped in the crowd.

Thomas G. Connolly of Boston, counsel for the I. W. W. in recent strikes, who preceded Ettor, said Haggerty had been an economic failure and had gone into the navy in order to be able to fill his stomach. This, he said, was the reason men go into the Navy and Army.

What Is "Service" Anyway?

It's Much Talked About, but Seldom Defined

As we understand it and dispense it at this Live Store, Service means giving you what you want, when you want it, the way you want it and at the lowest possible price consistent with good quality —standing ready at all times to give you new goods or refund your money in case your purchase should fail to give the most complete and lasting satisfaction.

Under that definition, no other Men's Store in New England can equal or even approach the service we render our customers, because no other store carries such a large stock of good clothes in such a wide variety of styles and sizes, or can afford to give so much value per dollar as we give.

That our interpretation of service—our better way of selling better clothes—meets the approval of the majority of men, the rapid growth of our business bears convincing evidence. If you're one of the few men who have never bought here, drop in any day. You'll be as welcome to look as to buy.

Suits from The House of Kuppenheimer

There's refinement of style, certainty of woolen worth and thoroughness of tailoring in Kuppenheimer Suits for men and young men that we have never yet seen equalled at similar prices nor surpassed at any price. There's nothing transient about their good style and good fit. They are put there to stay. Many choice foreign fabrics, formerly beyond reach of the average purse, are included this season along with the finest product of American looms.

Prices Range $18 $20 $22.50 $25 up to $35

Here are thousands of finely tailored, all wool suits —not an undesirable style or pattern among them— and every one good enough to carry our guarantee of satisfaction. If we were doing a small, high-rent, charge-account business, they'd be $15. As it is they are $12.50

Those fine Stillwater Worsteds are not the only good suits here at $15. Grays, mixtures, pencil stripes, blue serges—anything your fancy may dictate—you'll find here in styles and qualities the same as cost you $3 to $5 more in stores that do business in the ordinary way $15.00

95c Kennedy Special Shirts—GUARANTEED 95c

If, in your judgment, these shirts do not fit and wear as well as any you ever bought at $1.50, we'll give you a new shirt for every one you return. Woven and printed designs, soft or laundered cuffs, sizes 13½ to 18. Not a "one day" special, but a typical year-round Kennedy value that can't be duplicated.

WALSH, BARRY AND CURLEY TO AID GOLD FUND

Governor Walsh, Lieutenant-Governor Barry, Mayor Curley and a host of professional talent will be on the stage at the Majestic Theatre Sunday night to help the Louis Gold benefit fund. It will be one of the most notable occasions of the kind in Boston's history.

The fund will go to the family of the late mother, invalid father and nine young brothers and sisters—of Louis Gold, the colored prisoner who was sentenced to the electric chair for the murder of Policeman Walter Denny. Gold, who was only 19 years old, was the sole support of the family. The big benefit concert will serve all who want to help in some substantial way to see that the unfortunate relatives are provided for.

The musical program of the first magnitude will take part. There will be Miss Julia Culp, the great contralto of Metropolitan Opera House fame; the Lotus Glee Singers, Boston favorites; Miss Grace Fisher, Miss Maxine Farnell and many others.

It will be a unique entertainment. Here is the program:

CUP YACHTS TO MEET IN FAST TRIALS AT GLEN COVE, JUNE 2

CUP YACHTS TO MEET JUNE 2 IN 1ST TRIALS

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

The first trials of the three New England built cup class boats Resolute, Defiance and Vanitie will take place at Glen Cove, N. Y., on June 2. By that time each one of these three boats will have been under a good sail test and have been hauled out and smoothed up for the race.

Probably as much feeling exists between the three professional skippers of these three yachts as ever in the history of the America cup.

Captain "Bill" Dennis, famed the world over as a skipper or racing yachts ranging from a schooner to a sloop is smiling contentedly over at Lawley's yard at Neponset while engineering the preliminary work of getting the boat ready to step the big steel mast of the Vanitie launched yesterday without a great deal of pomp or ceremony.

Of course out on the bowsprit of the Defiance now at the Bath Iron Works at Bath, Me., is a big brass head that looks like the point of a lead pencil.

HOW RIVAL SKIPPERS STAND.

Captain Dennis when asked what he thought of the idea of placing this rather formidable head piece to the Defiance's bowsprit smiled and answered.

"Well, boys, I haven't seen it, but I will give them plenty of room, don't worry. This boat of mine is one that we don't find any faults in and of course there will be plenty of room for the other two."

Down at Bath when Captain Selah S. Howell, the professional skipper of the Defiance and Designer George Owen was asked about this same head piece their answer was:

"It will do some damage, won't it, if we get into close quarters?"

Captain Christensen who is handling the Herreshoff boat Resolute is just now pretty busy minding his own business and sailing the Resolute off Newport.

Up to date he hasn't said much of anything about either the Defiance and the Vanitie but from the way the Resolute is sailing he is perfectly contented with the way his boat is acting.

BEST DAYS FOR YACHTSMEN.

Work was started yesterday on placing the centreboard in the big sloop that is to be the Defiance at Bath. By tomorrow or Sunday this boat will be on its way under tow of the tug Orion bound for Marblehead.

It is barely possible, according to Designer Owen today, that the Marblehead folks may see the Defiance under sail if the weather conditions permit, but these have got to be exceptionally good.

The Defiance is headed around the cape for Newport, Long Island.

The Resolute is already in the hands of its manager, Robert W. Emmons, 2nd, who, Charles Francis Adams 2nd and for the next three days will have its mooring alloted by the Naval station at Newport, R. I.

Demand Another Game.

MELROSE High will demand that the protested game between Somerville High and Medford High, which was finally thrown out, be played over again. If this game is not played over Somerville and Medford will only be playing fifteen games in the league series and the odd game can be a long way towards deciding the championship of the league, so close is the race.

Somerville-Melrose in Clash.

SOMERVILLE and Melrose will play their twice postponed league game this afternoon at Recreation Field, Somerville. The game will start at 2 o'clock in order that the Melrose players may get early to a banquet. This game was originally scheduled to be played on Wednesday but rain forced a postponement.

Jack Ross Will Pitch.

JACK ROSS will pitch for Melrose this afternoon and with any kind of support should prove the victor over the Red and Blue. This will be the second meeting between these two teams in the league series. Somerville having won the first game. It has been printed by mistake that Ross pitched for Melrose in the last game and was hit hard and defeated, but this was not the case, as Ross pitched a hard game against Everett the day previous and played in the outfield against Somerville.

Ross Best in League.

ROSS is by far the best hurler in the Suburban League and many pick him to pitch his team to the top of the ladder before the season comes to a close. Ross has not been defeated in a league game this season. Captain Hunter, the star first baseman on the team, is suffering an injured leg but he will play this afternoon if there is a possible chance. Hunter is game to the core and it will require much opposition from his physician and coach before he agrees to stay on the bench.

Melrose After the Lead.

A VICTORY for Melrose this afternoon would put the team in tie for first position, sharing the honors with Everett High with four victories and two defeats.

Fitzgerald in Shape.

JACK FITZGERALD will pitch for Somerville this afternoon against Melrose. Fitzgerald has not pitched for over a week and is in the best of shape.

Enclosed Field for Melrose.

THE game between Melrose High and Malden High to be played tomorrow will be contested on Messenger's Field, Melrose. This is an inclosed field. The fact that Melrose now has an enclosed field will make it possible for the followers of that school to see more of the big contests played at home. Previous to this, the Melrose baseball and football teams have been forced to play their big games away from home in order to get a big revenue, as Everett, Malden Medford and Somerville all have enclosed fields.

Strong Crew at Groton.

GROTON School bids fair to have the best eight-oared crew that has ever been developed at the historic institution this year. The crew is now working hard over the Groton course in preparation for a race with Exeter, to be rowed at Groton a week from next Wednesday.

Material Not of Best.

AT the start of the season when candidates were called the prospects for a fast boat were none too bright and Coach Abbott was forced to do some tall hustling to develop material that would hold the high standard of previous crews turned out at Groton.

Two Records Set Up.

TWO records have already been established by the crews in practice spins. Over the stretch on the river known as the "Minute" the crew clipped two full seconds off the old mark of 59 seconds, and over the half mile course made a new record of two minutes and five seconds.

New Stroke Being Used.

A NEW stroke is being used by the Groton crews this season. The stroke has less body swing than usual but with a longer slide and more leg drive. This change was made this year at the suggestion of several colleges that depend on several good oarsmen from Groton each year. The crew now rows as follows, Oliphant stroke; Captain Coombs, 7; P. Lawrence, 6; Norie, 5; DeVeau, 4; Schleffelin, 3, McVeagh, 2; Anderson, bow; Murray, coxswain.

Huntington Squad Leaves for Amherst

Fourteen members of the Huntington School track team, accompanied by Coach Sexton and Manager Cartland, left Boston today at 3 o'clock for Amherst to compete in the Amherst interscholastic games to be held tomorrow afternoon. The boys will take a short workout on the Amherst track this afternoon.

Zeigler, Reuba, Jewell, O'Hara, Verder, Cahill, Kerr, Smith, Jones, Jackson, Leidy, Skinner, Taylor, S. Daniels and Barry were the athletes to take the trip and these boys should win enough points to take first honors in the meet.

Braves Release Two Recruit Pitchers

Manager George Stallings of the Braves has started cutting down his squad and today announced the release of Fred Herche to Rochester and Frank Schmitt to Montreal. Both are recruit pitchers and should make good in the International League.

TWO GOLF TIES FOR PLAY-OFF AT CLYDE PARK

MATCH PLAY DRAWINGS FOR COUNTRY CLUB CUP

H. W. Brown (83) vs. J. J. Gallagher (88).

F. H. Hoyt, (83) vs. S. S. Campbell (84).

G. H. Crocker (80) vs. S. K. Sterne (86).

J. M. Sullivan, Jr., (86) vs. J. D. Standish, Jr., (80).

A. Guilford (84) vs. playoff of tie No. 1.

W. S. Lawrence, (80) vs. F. W. Whittemore (79).

G. R. Clough (87) vs. H. H. Wilder (90).

Playoff of tie No. 2 vs. L. A. Frothingham (86).

Play in the annual three-day Spring meeting at the Country Club promises some splendid contests, as the luck of the draw has divided the favorites in goodly fashion, leaving E. W. Brown, F. H. Hoyt, S. K. Sterne, J. D. Standish, Jr., and J. H. Sullivan in the upper half, and J. Guilford, F. W. Whittemore, V. S. Lawrence, H. H. Wilder and L. A. Frothingham in the other.

A play-off of the tie for last place in the qualification started the day's festivities at 9:30, with S. T. Hicks, T. O. Stevenson and F. J. O. Alsop striving for the two coveted places in the drawing that allows them to continue in today's match play.

J. H. Sullivan, the winner of the recent open amateur meeting at Wellaston, and J. D. Standish, Jr., a former title holder in Michigan, Pinehurst, N. C., and Austria, attracted the greatest following, as they appeared very evenly matched, and V. S. Lawrence, a 3-handicap man, and F. W. Whittemore, the medalist, also had a small gallery.

G. R. Clough, the treasurer of the Belleroi G. C., and H. H. Wilder, secretary of the Massachusetts Golf Association, as celebrities, also were picked as an interesting couple to follow.

N. S. Campbell, a former Yale golfer, and F. H. Hoyt, a finalist at the Country Club last Fall, had a good contest before the morning was over.

In addition to the matches on 18-hole Handicap vs. Bogey event for outsiders who had entered, and home club members as post entrants, brought out a good field.

Syracuse Oarsman Hurt.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 15.—Morgan Davidson, stroke of the Syracuse University junior eight-oared crew, probably will be out of that boat for some time. His cheek bone may be fractured by an injury sustained while playing ball.

Schoolboy Crews Decide on May 27 for Big Regatta

[illegible] been selected by the Secondary Rowing Association captains and faculty managers as the date for the third annual regatta on the Charles River course.

The following schools will have crews: Stone, Roxbury Latin, Noble & Greenough, Volkmann and Browne & Nichols.

The second crew race will open the regatta at 2:30. Noble & Greenough drew the wall position, while Browne & Nichols drew that position in the first crew race.

The drawings for position resulted:

Championship Crews, Final Heat—No. 1, Browne & Nichols; No. 2, Stone School; No. 3, Noble and Greenough; No. 4, Volkmann; No. 5, Roxbury Latin.

Second Crews, Final Heat—No. 1, Noble & Greenough; No. 2, Roxbury Latin, No. 3, Browne & Nichols.

BILL M'KINNON AND ROBINSON MEET TONIGHT

By JACK CONWAY.

BILL McKINNON, who does his part in aiding Mr. James H. Curley in keeping Roxbury on the map, and George Robinson, Cambridge's ebony hued box fighter, should furnish plenty of action when they clash in a twelve-round bout at the University A. C in Cambridge tonight. Each boxer will weigh about 175 pounds. Therefore we will probably not be committing any offence which is punishable with a fine or imprisonment if we assert that it is a heavyweight battle.

McKinnon does not claim to be a "white hope" but it is rumored that he would not experience much trouble in defeating some of the young men who declare that they are coming heavyweight champions. Williams is perfectly satisfied to keep boxing wherever he gets a chance and does not waste any time in informing us that he will ultimately become a champion. All of which causes us to call for a rising vote of thanks.

Robinson is well known to the fistic lovers of New England as he has put up some good battles in these parts. He has not fought as many famous fighters as the saddleman from Roxbury but the wise men nevertheless declare that he has an even chance to breeze in a winner.

A boxing card would hardly be complete without some preliminary battles between prominent New England boys. Consequently the noble matchmaker of the Cambridge club has booked three preliminary contests. Gardner Brooks of Lowell and Johnny O'Brien of Roxbury will meet in one of the preliminary battles. Brooks is a nephew of the illustrious Jimmy Gardner and has mastered some of the ring tricks which made Jimmy famous in days of yore.

LANNIN TAKES OVER COMPLETE CONTROL OF THE RED SOX TODAY

HARVARD STARS HAVE HOPES OF BEATING YALE

By NICK FLATLEY.

Harvard is ready for the annual track tussle with Yale, Harvard, too, is fairly confident of victory at the Stadium tomorrow. Despite the loss of star athletes and notwithstanding the great record of the Yale scoring outfit, hope dwells high in the Harvard heart.

This, too, when it was made known today that Coach "Pooch" Donovan would not allow any of his men who were crippled a week back to go to the marks in the dual affair.

The new confidence is of very recent birth—it came into being early in the week when some of the Harvard stars began to reel off practice stunts in close to record time. It increased when they kept up the good work yesterday in the final trials.

The Harvard track guardians figure that while the Crimson is undoubtedly weak in second and third place marks in several events, the champions of the outfit can come mighty near picking up enough firsts to turn the tide of victory Cambridgeward.

NEED FIGHT FIRSTS.

A passing analysis of the exact situation shows wherein the new faith has its foundation. There are thirteen events on tomorrow's program. First places count 5 points, seconds 3 and thirds 1, a total of 104 points.

Eight first places—with their forty points—would make the meet fairly sure for Harvard. The scattering twelve points necessary for at least a tie should be picked up.

Consequently, the Harvard slogan is "Eight Firsts." And it's not exceeding the speed limit to say that perhaps Harvard will get them.

Here's the way the Crimson leaders have it figured out.

Barron to win the 100 and 220-yard dashes—Two firsts.

Bingham to win the 440-yard dash —Two firsts.

Jackson to win the high and low hurdles—Five firsts.

Hoyt to win the two-mile run—Six firsts.

Johnstone to win the high jump—Seven firsts.

Camp to win the pole vault—Eight firsts.

This is merely a hope at best—a wild one, perhaps. But the reasons for it are at least plausible.

Captain Barron, the star Harvard sprinter, is a moral certainty in the furlongs, the Cornell meet, he came within a fifth of a second of the world's record (21 1-5 seconds) beating out Dave Caldwell. He did this after jumping into the short dash when he had been training all season for the quarter.

For the past week he has been practicing sprint starts and can now get away in beautiful fashion. In time trials at the century he has been clocked within a stride of ten seconds. This speed will be too much for Tommy Curtis, the Eli sprint hope, who is never much better than a 10 1-5 man. Cornell, too, is the dire foe that has not gotten under 22 seconds as yet this season.

BINGHAM FOR QUARTER.

As for the quarter, the Harvard outlook is quite as bright. Here a battle royal is assured when Bingham of Harvard and Wilkie of Yale set together Saturday Bingham won the event against Cornell in 48 4-5 seconds, equaling the Ithaca track record. On the same day his rival was first home in the dual meet against Princeton in 49 3-5 seconds. But Bingham was pushed, while Wilkie got away from his field in the stretch. Bingham's wonderful nerve and fighting ability however, should be enough to swing this five pointer to the Harvard side of the score card.

The 440 looks like a win for the New Haven outfit, as Captain Brown, the only college man who ever beat the great John Paul Jones, is undoubtedly the greatest college half-miler in the country at the present time. Carter of Harvard is fast, but it is hard to see where he can touch the Eli leader. He looks good for second, though.

Again, the nine aspirants to be a Yale varsity, and the Crimson hopes minus Kerr, have no very great odds, while the Bill Poucher can easily beat 4.

Harvard counts Butler, Jackson will be one of the huge to give up to his part of the program. He should win the high hurdles handily enough. Porter of Yale will keep him from the low hurdling. In the low events at their extra distance, the Blue athlete is at his best, while the Crimson star is not any too much in love with the long distance.

JACKSON GOING FAST.

He has been kept at the low work all week, however, and in addition has been sent through several fast quarters, and appears to have regained his full strength. His time for the distance is better than Porter's, but the latter is coming all the time and will be a mighty dangerous rival.

The two-mile promises a great battle between Hoyt and Blackman of Harvard and Frost of Yale. The Harvard cross-country stars, however, have the experience behind them and are very logical favorites.

In the high jump, the confidence in Johnstone was restored, when some days back he again started soaring the six-foot mark, something he had not previously done since last season. He has held true and Wesley Oler, the former schoolboy star, who is Yale's best card in the event, will have to perform in much better fashion than he has been so far this Spring.

Camp's best performance in the pole vault this year in competition has been [illegible] inches, against Cornell, when Carter of Yale has wriggled over three inches higher, according to reports from the training camp. But the Crimson performer, since he has been taken off high jumping has come along in good shape and with a bit of fortune may get the bar up close to 13 feet.

Cook of Yale looks like a good bet in the broad jump, though Johnstone of Harvard, provided he is lucky enough to get a good spring, can better 22 feet, which is about the Blue star's best. Lund however, has another foot man in Hampton, who was on the freshman squad a year ago.

In the hammer throw Limehouse of Yale has by far the best record of any of the entrants, but Burch of Harvard has mastered the knack of the swing lately, and may surprise the wise ones.

OUIMET TO PLAY GIRL

Champion Dated Up in France.

SINGER GETS MATCH

PARIS, May 15.—Francis Ouimet, the Yankee golf champion, has challenged Miss Maggie Teyte, the well known opera singer, to a golf game over the course at Chantilly when he comes to France the last of this month. New Year's the two played at the Brae-Burn Club at Boston, but the champion gave up at the tenth hole and he promised to finish the stunts.

YANKEES LOSE CHANCE TO WIN ST. GEORGE CUP

LONDON, May 15.—John Graham, Jr. of the Royal Liverpool Golf Club today won the St. George's up at Sandwich, defeating the stars of both England and America. Graham's score for two day's medal play over the 36 holes was 146

This tournament was regarded as of the highest importance as it usually gives a line on the British championship. The championship contest will open on Monday. Nine of the Americans entered to contest for the British title competed for the St. George's cup.

The defeat of all the American golfers contesting for the St. George's cup was conceded when Graham turned in his card.

Jerome D. Travers made yesterday's round in 77 but to defeat Graham it was necessary for him to make today's round in better than 69, a feat regarded as practically impossible.

Inslee, the third American to finish, made 81 today, his total being 169. Three British players were tied at 153, when oughs Grant turned in a card of 79. His score yesterday was 74.

RANSOM FELL OFF.

Hopes of victory for an American contender in the competition for the Harvard and Front of Yale. The Harvard cross-country stars, however, have the experience behind them and are very logical favorites.

Ransom was a hot favorite in the betting when he started, but his backers were disappointed. Ransom played poorly at the outset and took 42 for the first nine holes. His game improved on the second nine, which he negotiated in 40. He was the first of the leaders to finish.

Fraser Hale of Chicago put up a wonderful game on the first nine holes today and covered them in 37, his only bad hole being the fifth, where he was bunkered and took seven. Harold Weber of Toledo took 43 for the same nine holes.

LANNIN TAKES OVER COMPLETE CHARGE OF SOX

Following the sale of their half-interest in the Red Sox to Joseph J. Lannin, General Charles Charles H. Taylor and John L. Taylor today resigned as officers and directors in the club and a new board of directors was elected to fill the vacancies.

The meeting was held in the club's downtown offices, 70 Devonshire street, at 11 o'clock. There were present, J. J. Lannin, Charles H. Taylor, John I. Taylor, Frank P. Cooper, Thomas W. Lannin, Secretary E. L. Riley and Charles T. Gallagher, General Taylor's attorney

After the Taylors had resigned the following directors were elected. P. H. Lannin, in place of John I. Taylor and Thomas W. Lannin, in place of Charles H. Taylor. President Lannin and Frank P. Cooper continue as directors as does John R. Turner of Jersey City. The club being a New Jersey corporation it is necessary to have a resident of that State as director E. L. Riley, who was secretary pro tem., was made permanent secretary of the organization. President Lannin is also a director as well as treasurer of the club.

P. H. Lannin is a brother of President J. J. Lannin, who is now the sole owner of the club, and Thomas W. Lannin is a cousin of the president. Thomas W. Lannin was also elected assistant secretary and will not only attend to club office business but will also take charge of the personal affairs of President Lannin, who has heavy interests in Forest Hills. The office of vice-president was left open for the present

JOHNSON PRESENT AT SALE.

The Taylors sold their half interest in the club to Mr. Lannin last night at the Algonquin Club. President Johnson of the American League was present and sanctioned the sale.

The price has not been given out, and it is doubtful if the general baseball public will be let in on this end as the entire transfer has been carried on very quietly.

The fans are wondering however, what the new head of the club will do as it is rumored in many quarters that, owing to the recent poor showing of several of the star players, a big shake up is due.

Tech Freshmen to Have Drill Tonight

Tech freshmen will end their drill season tonight with the prize drill of the freshman regiment in the South Armory on Irvington street. After the drill the freshmen will hold the annual glove-burning celebration and parade.

HARVARD SECOND CREW PICKED TO WIN SHORT RACE

More hope was infused in the Harvard camp when Captain Reynolds reported for practice after an illness of two days. It was also learned that Charlie Behall was dismissed from the Stillman infirmary and immediately after left Cambridge for New London, where he will sojourn until next Monday.

Captain Reynolds took his old place at bow, relieving Herrick, who has been substituting for him. Herrick accompanied the second varsity squad to Philadelphia as a substitute. The boat showed a little of the old-time form with Reynolds back at bow; it not only had a better finish, but the catch also showed improvement.

The practice was cut rather short on account of the new men, Reynolds and Gardiner, rowing for the first time after a lay off.

A short stretch at a fairly high stroke was attempted, but did not prove very successful, as the boat was very unsteady.

The "seconds" had their last workout before they left for Philadelphia. They did not row very long, but merely tried short stretches at a high stroke. They rowed over one of these stretches at a stroke of forty-five to the minute, which only goes to show that they can get the strokes as high as this and keep it there for quite a while.

They should not have any difficulty in wining the junior event next Saturday, but will have their work cut out in the senior event, in which they will also compete.

Offers $1,000 Even on English Four

New York, May 16.—The first betting flutter in the financial district on the international polo match were quoted in two offers. The first was an offer by a produce Exchange member, recorded at Fred Schamm's No. 2 Stone street, to bet $1,000 even on the English team for the series. The absence of a demand for odds in supporting the English team was surprising in view of cables from the other side. There also was an offer of $500 even on the American team to win the first game.

LAWRENCE, May 15.—Al Shubert of New Bedford won his seventh consecutive victory at the Unity Cycle Club by beating Finney Boyle of Lowell in twelve rounds. The bout was one of the best of the season and kept the crowd on tiptoe to the finish.

Young Joseph of Lowell beat Johnny Thomas of Lawrence in eight rounds. Eddie Burke and Young Casey, both of this city, went six rounds, the former getting the decision, and Billy Brooks of Lowell stopped Young Duffy of this city in one round.

COLLINS TO GO AFTER BROWNS IN FINAL GAME

Last appearance this trip of the St. Louis Browns, Moss Rickey manager. The Red Sox have won the two games played and with Collins pitching will make a bold bid for the final battle. If Collins doesn't pitch Bedient will do the heavy work.

"The "rejuvenated" Browns looked a little more rejuvenated yesterday than they did in the first game. They displayed plenty of pepper and made two bold attempts to win by the steal-home method. Without exactly knowing how he did it, Leonard caught both would-be burglars at the plate.

But the Browns proved that they were trying all the time. Ban Johnson, who saw the game from a grandstand box, declared the players displayed by the visitors is due to the jabs of the portly baseball czar's cane carried around by Mose Rickey, their new manager.

In spite of their victory the Red Sox outfit did not clout the ball very hard. Stuffy McInnis, who was jumped to the Federals and then jumped back again, is some pitcher and therefore not eager to hit.

It is believed the Sox will have better success against the Tiger pitchers Jennings and his band arrive here tomorrow. They are cutting quite a swath in the American league. So Yankee [illegible] them as yet. It is up to Uncle Bill's crowd to do it.

In the meantime [illegible] set-to in Philadelphia, it looks as though the Athletics will have a little [illegible] before the series three straight.

BRAVES FIGHT HARD TO STOP RUNAWAY REDS

CINCINNATI, May 15.—With the Reds two games to the good, Stallings and his band of braves went after the Cincinnati bunch in the third game today determined to wipe out the double abstuut record in the series to date.

The Reds won yesterday's game by the score of 6 to 0. It was southpaw day with Fube Benton on the mound for the Reds and Tyler doing slab work for Bostons.

Moran started the scoring in the first inning, coming in from first on Groh's single to right. In the fourth Maranville doubled to right. Moran and Rudolph crossed the plate on Schmidt's fly to Evers back of second.

Konetchi and Niehoff scored on Clarke's single to centre in the sixth as Heston waddled home in the fifth Wade Herring doubled to centre with the first man up in the game. Benton and Umpire Eason raised on a decision on Collins' hit. Benton showed Eason and there was a free for all fight on from bench and field with the umpire as the goal.

Herzog made a few choice remarks and as a consequence Benton and the Red Sleuther left the field. Dan Boeckel went to the mound for the Rhinelanders and Rawlings took up where Herzog left off.

Boston's best chance to score came in the fifth inning when Whaling and Mann were on second and third respectively with two out and Maranville up.

The Braves' shortstop was there with the strike out stuff and the Boston Castle of Ropes fell to ruins.

MITCHELL'S SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

PRESIDENT TENER, of the National League, now has three protested games on his hands and the championship season is not a month old.

First, Manager Herzog of Cincinnati, protested a game claiming that when one of his men was at bat some one threw a ball in from the back of the grand stand, the ball hitting the batsman and causing him to step back at the moment the opposing pitcher delivered a ball which was called a third strike and retired the side.

Next Manager O'Day of Chicago, protested that Thursday's Pittsburgh-Chicago game, arguing that Umpire Klem miscued in calling Mollwitz out when a thrown ball hit him as he was galloping around the bases.

Third, Manager Stallings of Boston, protested Saturday's game in New York claiming that Umpire Higler was wrong in declaring that Snodgrass made a fair catch of a ball when the Boston player says it was caught on the bound.

It is very doubtful if President Tener will allow any of these claims but the novelty aids of protesting will go on in the National League as usual. The loss there are fifteen or twenty protested games a year in the old organization the season would seem dull indeed.

* * *

LAST season the St. Louis Browns stole home a couple times on "Dutch" Leonard. It wasn't such a grand stand to steal home on "Dutch" Leonard last season. Nearly every club in the American League did it—in fact, it got to be so common an occurrence that with Leonard in the box the game didn't seem to be complete unless some one stole home.

* * *

THE St. Louis Browns never forgot how simple a matter it was to score on "Dutch" whenever a man reached third. They dreamed about it all Winter, and in their waking moments they longed for the time when they would be in Boston again and in a game with Leonard pitching for the Red Sox.

* * *

WELL, the opportunity came yesterday in the second game of the series. The St. Louis players laughed in their sleeves all through the minutes of practice in anticipation of the fun they would have stealing home, and when the game began they were laughing so hard they couldn't hit the ball.

In the second inning, however, Williams managed to work Leonard for a pass. It was so serious to steal home before the side was retired that he stole second, and then at the first favorable opportunity he stole third.

* * *

WITH the stage set just to his liking, Williams waited until Leonard began to make his customary windmill windup and then dashed madly for the plate. But somehow or other Leonard managed to cut out eight or nine yards of the windup and was able to throw straight into Carrigan's hands. Bill touched Williams before he reached the plate, and the St. Louis player sheepishly got up and dusted his pants. It was the first time on record any big leaguer had failed to steal home on Leonard and, naturally, Williams was peeved.

* * *

WILLIAMS' teammates told him to cheer up, as the game was young, and they got to chuckling so that they went out in one-two-three order (save for one single) up to the opening of the sixth inning. Then Hamilton led off with a two-bagger and took third when Leonard fumbled, and made a poor throw of Shotten's bunt. Before Hamilton could try to steal home, Howard grounded out, Leonard to Engle, and Shotten raced to second. Pratt then rapped to Gardner, whose throw to the plate nipped Hamilton and put Shotten on third.

* * *

THINGS were just right again for another attempt to steal home while Leonard was watching Pratt, Shotten sneaked toward the plate and then cut loose. He was about ten feet from the man when Leonard woke up, but he made a quick turning and throwing to Carrigan in time to retire Shotten on the closest kind of a play.

The play was so close that Mose Rickey kicked long and hard. Finally he was chased to the showerbath, as was also Catcher Agnew, who used violent language to Umpire Egan. This put such a damper on the St. Louis crowd that they forgot to try the steal home trick again. And they had two more chances, too.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

IT MUST BE SOME CONSOLATION To Manager Stallings to know that he has one pitcher whom he can rely on. Yes, sir, Bill Dinneen has struck there's very, very few who can beat him. His great exhibition in Cincinnati [illegible] date.

ONE SCRIBE THINKS HE HAS PICKED the greatest team that could possibly be assembled. The infield of the Athletics, the outfield of the Red Sox, the pitching staff of the White Sox and the catching staff of the Yankees would comprise the team. It would be some team at that.

* * *

"I DON'T SPECIFY THE HOUR AT WHICH my players must go to bed," says Branch Rickey of the Browns. "But I do demand that they get up at 7 o'clock and get right down to work. They have been trying to retire early, but if Rickey's rule [illegible] he's entitled to be in bed by 11:45 o'clock he must have some fast excuses.

STERLING ALE

No man who knows American brewing questions the quality or popularity of Sterling Ale.

LEADING all, and following none, Sterling still is more an old-fashioned than a new-fangled ale. None of its goodness is lost in any filter. Its life is no quick frothing, but the enduring sparkle of champagne. And, while distinctly less alcoholic, it has all the body and tang of a genuine old-time ale.

In short, Sterling unites the good points of the brewing past and present, in a beverage which, if it is not perfection, is at least satisfaction in ale.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I DREAMED last night that I was the queen of a wonderful island out in the Pacific Ocean," said the Manicure Lady. "It was some dream, and, believe me, George, I was some queen. I thought I got a flash at myself in one of them ball mirrors and admitted that I was beautiful, and that's something I never done before. You ought to have saw the court gown I had on and the beautiful court ladies that was with me, one on me."

"That's the kind of dreams to have," said the Head Barber. "There ain't no use being a piker and dreaming that you are broke."

"Gee, but I felt sad, though, when I woke up," said the Manicure Lady. "I could see all my subjects coming and bringing me swell presents. They was queer looking people, they was. They didn't look like human beings at all. They was about ten feet high and only the women was beautiful. The men had the dumbest faces I have ever saw, and goodness knows I have saw some dumb faces since I got into this manicuring business. The women was the only ones that had any rights, according to my dream, and they sure did lord it over the men. There wasn't a man on that island that dared to call his soul his own, and the way they ran when I came near was a caution. I was wondering, in my dream, how long I had been a queen and how long women had had all the rights, when the alarm clock called me back to earth, and I realized that I wasn't no queen at all, but would have to go through the same old grind today, listening to the same old voices and seeing the same mugs. It sure gave me a blue start for the day."

"You don't have to look at my mug if it pains you," said the Head Barber. "And you ain't the only one that feels blue over a dream, either. I dreamed last night that racing was back on earth and that I had a string of about twenty winners in my stable. I felt in that dream just the way Pittsburgh Phil must have felt in the days of his glory, with a lot of jockeys and stable boys bowing to me and a lot of racetrack fans pointing me out. If that wasn't a tough dream to wake up out of and start barbering again, there never was a dream."

"A gent like you would call that pretty near heaven, I suppose," said the Manicure Lady, "but there wasn't the class to your dream that there was to mine. I thought there was a king came from some other island to propose to me. He was the handsomest thing you ever seen, George. Taller than even the people on my island, and not a bit dumb looking, like the men that were my subjects. I thought we was just going to be married when the dream was over, and now I shall never see him."

"What if you don't?" said the Head Barber. "You wouldn't want no guy ten or eleven feet tall for a husband, would you? He would stop traffic everywhere he went, and you would be ashamed to go out anywhere with him. And if you had one of them dream husbands you would have to keep right on working for a living, anyhow. He wouldn't be able to bring home the bacon."

"There ain't no romances in you and never will be," declared the Manicure Lady. "When I tell you about something beautiful and grand, you always begin talking about food. I might just as well talk to a fat pig about the beautiful sunset. But they say dreams sometimes come true, and maybe that dream meant that us girls is going to run things in time."

"Maybe you will," said the Head Barber, "when the men get as dumb as the men in your dreams."

CHAPTER ONE

One Step Downward

WALTER ROGERS, alone in his office, his head in his hands and despair in his heart, listened almost mechanically to the tick of the clock.

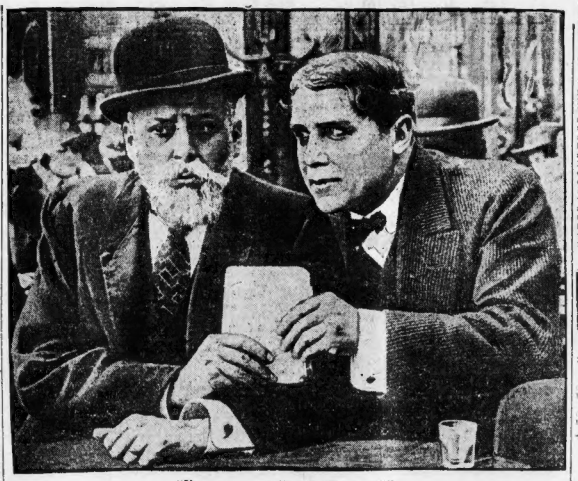
Every minute that ticked away so joyfully brought him so much nearer to the end; disgrace and ruin were staring him in the face, and there was nothing in the world he could do to ward off the blow.

Where had his passion for gambling carried him? Surely he hadn't been in his right mind last night. And yet it seemed so easy to try just once more and hope for better luck next time; that's what they all said when they had clapped him on the back and assured him that his luck was bound to change soon. And now, after taking their advice, what was he? A ruined man, with hardly enough capital at his command to carry on the day's work.

Crazed with the thoughts that the ruin had brought him, Rogers rose dizzily from his chair and walked unsteadily out into the street. Just where he was going he had no idea; nothing was clear but the fact that something must be done, and that quickly, if anything could save him from the inevitable downfall. Laughing and high-pitched voices from a nearby cafe dimly attracted his attention, and he stumbled blindly in and sat down at a small table.

A paper that some one had dropped was lying on the floor at his feet, and he mechanically picked it up. There in glaring headlines was emblazoned the failure of a mine in which he had heavily invested, the Cap Sheaf, and falling back heavily in his chair he lifted the glass of whiskey to his lips.

"What's the matter, old man?" said a voice out of the hazy somewhere he had left behind him, and a shabby, thickly set man seated himself at the table and stretching out a hand, said thickly, "Come, pull yourself together, if it's a way out of money troubles I'm your man."



"I'm your man," said Phoney Bill.

Rogers looked up with a start, as though he had heard the man speak for the first time.

"How did you know?" he gasped.

The man laughed. "Your face and then the paper, and certain other things that happened last night. But look here." And he pushed across the table a note, and a huge roll of bills.

Roger's breath caught in his throat as his fingers closed around the comforting wad.

"Pretty nice, eh?" said the man, "almost like the real thing, well, they're yours for five hundred straight, if you care to use them. Better read the note, perhaps that will bring you around."

Rogers lifted the note that he had held crushed in his hand. It was from one of the men who had staked him heavily the night before, he wanted money. He looked across at Phoney Bill, who was watching him eagerly. And then comprehension slowly dawned in his eyes, and he threw the bill across the table and rose to go.

"Just a minute," said Bill pushing him back into his seat. "You need money, don't you? What do you think Jerry is going to do when he finds out that you aren't game? Your better take it, Rogers, it's your only chance, and an easy thing to put over at that."

Rogers looked at him dully, and once more his losses swept over him with all their terrible consequences. This was a way out, not very safe way, but one worth trying. He stretched out his hand again, and Bill leaned across the table and spoke quickly. "Just substitute it for the real thing, that's all you have to do, only five hundred dollars for all that wad, and sign this paper so that we'll know you took the money."

Rogers grasped the money this time decidedly, and hastily signing his name to the paper Bill held out, he stumbled out of the cafe with the bills safely tucked away in an inside pocket. Now that he had taken the step, the rest seemed easy. After all, no one would suspect him, and he could easily put the money in the safe while Hartley was out for lunch. Reaching his office he hastily counted over the bills and then slipped softly down the hall to the cashier's office. No one was there, and it was the work of a minute to open the safe and take out what he needed. And then, with the crisp bank notes safely in his possession he crept softly to the door, opened it, and closed it noiselessly behind him.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HIS MOTHER SHOULD BE CONSIDERED

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and love a young man of twenty-one, whom I know loves me very much. I have gone out with him many times and he has asked me to keep company with him, but he is very much worried because his mother objects, for the reason that I am a poor girl and have no money. He told me he doesn't want to go against his mother's wishes, but he loves me and knows that I am a refined girl from respectable people. As he doesn't have to depend on his parents to make a living, he doesn't care what his mother says.

If he were a few years older, I would advise him to give love a chance first of all; but he is only twenty one, and is still answerable to his mother.

Wait a few years. If her objections are based solely on your financial circumstances I am quite sure time will overcome them.

A DECLARATION NOT TO BE DEFERRED

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and have been keeping company with a young man four years my senior. But lately he is getting serious, always mentioning me as his future wife. How can I tell him I do not love him?

E. K.

If may be hard to tell him you don't love him, but every day this is deferred makes it that much harder. Moreover, to accept his attentions, knowing marriage is his intention, is neither fair nor honorable.

IT IS NOT OBLIGATORY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Is it customary to send a gift to a bride upon receipt of an invitation to attend the church wedding but not the reception at the home of the bride following? Also, is it proper to acknowledge receipt of the invitation to the church wedding?

CONSTANT READER.

If one should, or should not, give a bride a present depends not upon invitation either to church or reception, but upon the closeness of the tie of friendship. If a mere acquaintance, don't give. If a dear friend, it is a graceful thing to send a gift, though one gets no invitation at all.

Thin People Can Increase Weight

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy flesh there fat should try eating Sargol. Sargol with their meals and note results. Here is a test worth trying. Find out for yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then get on the scales and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or how much your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can gain from five to eight pounds in three weeks' time (two tablets with meals three times a day following the first direction. And best of all, the flesh you put on is real, healthy flesh.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food it turns the fats, starches and sugars in what you have eaten into rich, red, fat-producing nourishment that feeds tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form so that the blood can readily accept it. All this nourishment then passes from your body as waste. But Sargol stops this waste and does it quickly and makes the fat-producing contents of the very same meals you are eating help develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive.

Druggists sell it in large boxes of forty tablets to a package on a guarantee of weight increase, or money back.—ADVERTISEMENT.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks opened with small gains, and a number of them went higher during the morning. Business during the first hour in New York totaled more than 121,000 shares, but the volume of trading lessened afterward. By midday there was slight reaction, profit-taking having some effect.

Early in the afternoon gains there included Canadian Pacific 1¼, Southern Pacific ⅝, Reading ¼, New Haven ¼, Calumet & Arizona ⅜, Granby ⅝, Mohawk ⅜, Osceola ⅝ and Alaska Gold ¼. Butte & Superior was then off ¼, North Butte ⅛, Copper Range ⅜, Boston & Maine, Elevated, United Fruit and Canadian Telephone were unchanged.

PRICES FIRM AT START.

Prices ranged a trifle above yesterday's closing level when the New York market opened and within a few minutes the tone had strengthened. Steel had remained its premier stock and during the morning sold as high as 61⅝. The usual industrial leadership and during the morning sold as all inactive. The market was active during the first hour, but then grew quiet. There was nothing new regarding the Mexican situation both in this country and abroad. It was believed that it will get the financial aid it needs helped that issue, and, as far as investing confidence is concerned, was beneficial to the list in general. Mexican Petroleum and other corporations with property in Mexico reflected the belief that such interests are in less danger. The rise in American Can, which was more active than usual, was chiefly due to reports that the inside interests have been accumulating its common stock recently in expectation that there will be a court decision in its favor in the dissolution suit brought by the government.

AMERICANS IN LONDON.

While Americans were irregular in London the majority showed gains and sentiment towards them was more favorable. There was more buying in Europe that the United States would not have to assume the costs of a war with Mexico. There was more firmness to console. Reports received from Berlin and Paris as to conditions in Germany and France were reassuring. All leading powers, however, are still trying to increase gold reserves. Yesterday's sterling exchange touched 485.60, or within five points of the highest last year. Today the exchange on London had declined to 485.25.

Dealings in the New York market did not indicate any participation by the public worth considering, that upturn there has been in prices is attributed to professional dealings. Any change in sentiment on the part of the regular trading element may be considered doubtful. It is said, however, that it is based upon future and not present conditions. Business is quiet everywhere, almost every line of trade, and if no edge over the business made itself apparent as yet.

Better weather promoted cheerfulness on exchanges today, and crop prospects seemed to be getting more consideration. No doubt one of the strongest of present bull influences is belief that the Interstate Commerce Commission will grant a rise in freight rates to Eastern roads. The scarcity of stocks is thought to indicate that liquidation has been drastic and is over.

AMALGAMATED'S REPORT.

Coppers were firm during the morning, although Amalgamated did not retain its gain throughout that period. For the year 1913 this corporation reported that its net income amounted to $4,171,376, which is equal to $5.30 a share. After paying dividends at the rate of $8 a share for last year, Amalgamated reports a deficit of $361,476. Anaconda showed a deficit of $1,574,805.

No change of importance was reported in the copper metal market. Producers are still asking 14½ cents a pound for electrolytic, and buying is unimportant.

BUTTE & SUPERIOR DIVIDEND.

Butte & Superior continued exceptionally active in the Boston market, first hour transactions in this issue totalling more than 6,000 shares. An explanation of the unusual demand for it was found in the declaration of an initial dividend today. It is a quarterly distribution and seventy-five cents a share, payable June 30 to stock of record June 15. Dividend action had not been expected for several weeks. This issue sold as high as 49⅞ after the declaration, but by afternoon had receded. Tamarack was a strong mine, advancing more than two points during the morning. It did not retain all of the rise. Other mining issues were also records. Granby and Mohawk. The local market had a good tone all the morning. By midday the list was irregular.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad has agreed to sell its 19,292 shares of Kanawha & Michigan Railway Company stock to the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern at a price netting a profit of $1,128,136.

It is expected that the contract for operating an express service over the lines of the Baltimore & Ohio now held by the United States Express Company will be transferred to the Wells Fargo Company.

The London copper warrants market was firm this morning and at spot and futures were each 5s higher.

Rebel Flyers Drop Bombs Into Fort

MAZATLAN, May 15.—General Obregon's military aviators were used in the battle that has been waged for many days at Masatlan. An aeroplane which circled about the Federal intrenchments dropped bombs with considerable accuracy into the fortifications.

Auto News

By J. G. KERRISON.

Heavy and systematic buying of motor trucks by big concerns was reported by the White Company of Cleveland yesterday. Many of the largest and most experienced truck users have made substantial investments in new equipment and their purchase of White trucks is the cumulative result of the service given by these trucks during the past four years.

Closely following the sale of thirty of their trucks to eleven contractors, coal companies and material dealers, as announced a few weeks ago, the White Company reports the sale of fifteen power dump trucks to county commissioners, contractors and building supply dealers.

In the list of current purchasers are eight municipalities and counties that bought power dump trucks for road work, five that bought hose apparatus, five that bought patrols, one that bought an ambulance.

President E. P. According to advices received from him the sun is shining brightly in more ways than one.

It would not be at all surprising if a little gasoline war developed between the local distributors in general line, especially in view of the fact that one company recently reduced prices and its reduction was met by its competitors. Another company, it is understood, guarantees to sell gasoline wholesale at one cent less than any of its competitors and will contract for a year's supply at a rate not to exceed fourteen cents a gallon.

Announcement is made by W. H. Van Dervoort, head of the Moline Automobile Company, that in order to clean out the remaining poppet valve motored cars of this type, they will be sold hereafter at a reduction of $400 in price. They used to sell at $1,950. The demand for Moline-Knight cars is such, Mr. Van Dervoort says, that room in the factory is at a premium and the best way to move them out is to offer them as stated above.

Letters from a United States Senator—and an Answer

What Is the Difference Between a Railroad Built by the United States and a Canal Dug by the United States?
All of the Difference BETWEEN A RAILROAD AND A CANAL of Course.

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

A distinguished gentleman, very recently a member of the United States Senate, and interested in the Panama Canal question, sends to us and asks us to answer a question which has been put to him.

This is the question:

If the United States should build a railroad in Alaska, as is contemplated, would it, by any possibility, be admissible for the government to allow citizens of the United States to use the tracks for their locomotives and cars (owned by such citizens) without paying for such trackage rights? If not, why should American coastwise ships use the Panama Canal (also paid for by the United States) without paying for such use?

The writer of the question apparently feels that he has settled the matter of free tolls. We disagree with him.

First of all, the Panama Canal is one of the waterways of the United States. We own both shores of the Canal; we own the Canal.

The government of the United States does not customarily charge its ships for the use of waterways.

The government spends money keeping up the Panama Canal, it is true.

The government also spends money keeping up the channel in Boston Harbor. And the government spends a great many millions keeping the Mississippi River in order, and a great many other millions in other parts of the American waterways.

But the government permits American ships to use these waterways and makes no charge.

The interest of the United States government in the Panama Canal is, first, to help the whole world by uniting the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans.

Second, to make our navy more powerful, by giving us a short cut between the two oceans from our Western to our Eastern coast, which no other navy can have.

Third, TO BUILD UP AN AMERICAN MERCANTILE MARINE.

The way to build up an American mercantile marine is to ENCOURAGE AN AMERICAN MERCANTILE MARINE.

We have no shipping industry worth talking of now. One reason for building the Canal was to help build up the shipping that we need, that shippers of freight need, that inhabitants all over the United States need, that this nation needs to compete with extortionate transcontinental freight rates.

Does the Senator or his friend ask whether the government is justified in spending money to build a canal in order to encourage American shipping, letting American shipping use the canal free?

The answer is found in United States railroad history.

There was a time when this country had NO TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILROAD.

The country needed those transcontinental railroads, as it now needs a great mercantile marine.

The government spent and gave tens of millions to encourage the transcontinental railroads.

The people of this country gave to the railroads HUNDREDS OF MILLIONS OF DOLLARS' WORTH OF LAND FREE.

And the people of this country gave to the builders of the transcontinental railroads tens of millions of cash to help them build the railroads that the nation needed.

The railroads now are taking the ground that the nation has no right to encourage American shipping, even to the slight extent of permitting ships built by United States owners to use an American waterway without charge.

But, if the United States should do for American coastwise shipping what it did for the railroads, it would not only permit the coastwise shipping to use the canal free of charge, but also give the ship owners tens of millions in cash to build the ships—for that is what the government did for the original creators of transcontinental railroads.

And while those transcontinental railroad owners were among the greatest thieves, rascals, property grabbers, perjurers and all-around scoundrels that the nation has developed, in spite of all they stole IT WAS A GOOD THING FOR THE COUNTRY THAT THE ROADS WERE BUILT.

We could afford to pay even the price that we did pay to the railroad thieves in order to get the railroads.

The government can well afford to give permission to American coastwise shipping to use an American waterway free as a slight encouragement to the building of American shipping.

Please note that there is a difference between using a waterway without charge and using railroad tracks without charge.

The Panama Canal WILL NOT WEAR OUT.

The American shipping will not USE UP THE WATER as it goes through the Canal.

American international shipping and the shipping of the whole world will pay tolls to the Panama Canal, going back and forth, providing for the upkeep of the Canal. Our coastwise shipping will use that waterway as it should, without paying tolls—AND OUR COASTWISE SHIPS WON'T DAMAGE THE WATER.

The main thing is, as the Senator who writes us well knows, that THIS COUNTRY HAS A RIGHT TO DO AS IT CHOOSES WITH ITS OWN. The important point is to have it clearly understood by England and every other country that when we dig a canal in our own territory with our own money WE CAN LET OUR OWN SHIPS USE THE CANAL FREE IF WE WANT TO DO THAT.

It is important that we should build up a mercantile marine, highly important that we should encourage coastwise shipping, to compete with and regulate transcontinental rates.

But is is infinitely more important that we should settle once and for all the question recently raised.

First, that the Monroe Doctrine is stronger than it ever was, not weaker.

Second, that the United States can dispose of its own property in its own way without the consent of Great Britain.

Third, that this country is, at least as well able to manage its own affairs in 1914 as it was in 1776, when it first had occasion to tell England that her day of dictation here was over.

Finally, in reply to our friend, the Senator, and his inquiring correspondent, we say that it is for the United States government to decide WHAT it will do with its own property. It may allow locomotives to go free over tracks that it builds if it chooses—just as it can allow farmers' wagons to go free over roads that it builds.

The government of the United States is the greatest and ONLY power in the United States in addition to being the greatest power in the world.

It is supposed to be represented by intelligent, carefully selected men at Washington. And that intelligence has the power to decide what the government shall do with its own, what favors it shall grant to this citizen, what taxes it shall lay upon that one.

And neither railroads from the east to the west coast, nor the English owners of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, nor the poor little mob anxious to carry British favor, has anything to say about it.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

It Would Fall Like Music on His Ears

Funston is waiting for word to come from Washington couched like the old boyville admonition: "Quit your quarrelling and go to fighting."

Still, That Would Account for It

We can think of no good reason for the Secretary of State's passionate friendship for the Constitutionalist leader, lunless he wants to get him as a vaudeville partner for the Summer season.

He Never Knows They Are Loaded

It is exactly as safe to trust Ambassador Page with a joke as to trust a five-year-old child with a double-barrelled shotgun.

Justifiable Procrastination

Perhaps Huerta is waiting to get out until he can import one of those 300-mile-an-hour trains just tried out in London.

Reliable Counsel

In these times some tired business men who have been engaged in side enterprises connected with the New Haven are advised to go to Europe by their doctors, and others by their lawyers.

Unprofitable Crime

Our idea of nothing to counterfeit is Mexican Constitutionalist money, which is worth about one cent on the Mexican dollar, which in turn is worth only fifty cents in American money.

The Widow's Mite and Where It Went

The Interstate Commerce Commission's investigation brought out the fact that the directors of the New Haven, which is owned mostly by widows, paid a college professor $10,000 a year to boost the road, and subsidized newspapers for the same purpose—all of which helped to deprive the widows of the dividends on which they depended for their support.

WHEN some poor hard-worked professor couldn't keep the wolf away
From his neat but mortgaged homestead on his meagre college pay,
The munificent New Haven, like a n angel, hovered near
With a philanthropic stipend of t en thousand bucks a year.
And the grateful man of letters, eased of his financial load,
Told his students the New Haven was a really splendid road.
This was pie for the professor, w ho has money now to lend,
And it only cost the widows half their yearly dividend.

WHEN some shaky Boston paper found its funds were running short,
And beheld a dismal future in the district bankrupt court,
The magnanimous New Haven put the paper on its feet,
And the editor thereafter had the wherewithal to eat.
And his busy staff of writers toil ed for all that they were worth
Upon proofs that the New Haven was the greatest road on earth.
Now the paper feels elated, and the editor contends
That it only cost the widows their r emaining dividends.

Clear Violation

If the government can't convict the New Haven on present charges, why not take the ages of some of the directors of subsidiary companies and go after them for breaking the child labor laws?

Contagious?

Another White House case and the country will be convinced that matrimony is catching.

Shortsighted

Before the Mexican Federals began blowing up that railroad to Vera Cruz they should have figured on how they are going to get out when the Constitutionalists get in.

We May Never Know

Not until we get into a row with a country like Russia, will we be able to tell whether battleships will easily prevail over bottleships.

Let Us Not Be Wastefully, Ridiculously Excessive

Why spend $300 for a medal for Doctor Cook when he'd feel just as happy and look a lot more natural with a fifty-cent wreath of flowers around his neck?

All the Component Parts

Michigan offers to supply the apple tree for the restored Garden of Eden. Huerta and Carranza will furnish Cain and the snake, and we believe Upton Sinclair would gladly go down and take the part of Abel, if he could get safe conduct out before anything really serious happened.

Big Enough for the Present

A French engineer says the Panama Canal is too small. It is large enough, however, for England to try to steal, which puts it in the same category with India, Egypt and most of the American continent.

No Hope

Upton Sinclair might as well stop right where he is. Sing Sing is overcrowded, and there is no chance for his advancement to a higher rank of martyrdom.

Back Up and Turn Around

"If free tolls, why not free postage?" asks a pro-railroad and pro-British newspaper. Also, if tolls on the canal, why not tolls on the streets, highways and parks?

As Omar Might Have Said

Write, for you know not who shall read, or why.

"Movies" Are Big Factor in War Against Folly

The Film Showing "The Drug Terror" an Excellent Illustration of "Experience by Proxy"

By DR. CHARLES H. PARKHURST

A YOUNG fellow who was just on the point of entering upon a wayward course was cautioned by his father, who said to the boy:

"My son, I want to warn you against taking the gait that you are now experimenting with. I have walked that road and have learned the folly of it."

"Well," said the boy, "I want to learn the folly of it, too."

Advice is apt not to be appreciated till it is too late; nevertheless, it is the duty of those who "have learned the folly of it," whether by experience or by observation, to hang out the danger signals, assured that while caution is not always respected, neither is it always rejected.

Moving picture reels are doing valuable dramatic work in this direction, and are giving promises of exhibiting the fruits of sin under forms so realistic and appealing as to secure to themselves a dignified and important position as instructors in decency, honesty and morality in general. They bring one so imaginatively close to the horrible results in which iniquity issues as to go far toward making the iniquity itself revolting.

The manner in which a practical lesson can be effectually taught by a picture drama is shown by a pictorial play now running at the Globe Theatre under the title "The Drug Terror." This presentation shows how the drug vice is hidden, and tells back upon body, mind and soul insinuatingly and insidiously.

Till the results of the habit begin to be realized there is nothing in the use of the stuff that directly offends against the moral sense even of those who are straight in their thinking and upright in their living.

And by the time that its damaging and damning effects have begun to be realized the victim already lies almost as helpless in the grasp of the habit as a lost sailor in the irresistible arms of an octopus. The destructibleness of the habit can be learned only in its results, and it is exactly for the purpose of revealing those results under their most pitiless and revolting forms that the films of "The Drug Terror" have been prepared and are being exhibited.

It will hardly be of service to those who are already cocaine fiends. They know it all without having it pictured to them. But to those who are just beginning to tamper with the accursed thing, and also to those who have not even been singed by the habit, this thrilling drama ought to appeal with tremendous effect.

Love Is the Magic Stone

This Must Have Been in the Mind of the Author of the Legend of the Philosopher's Stone That Turns Everything to Gold

By DOROTHY DIX

THERE is a pretty old legend that has come down to us through the ages that tells of a magic stone that would turn into pure gold any base metal that it touched. It was called the Philosopher's Stone, and many people spent their whole lives in searching for it. None ever found it, and it still remains the object of unfulfilled desire, of unappeased avarice.

No one has ever discovered the Philosopher's Stone of the physical world that can transmute iron into gold, but we have discovered the Philosopher's Stone of the spiritual world that has only to touch the ugly and sordid facts of everyday life to turn them into beauty.

It is Love, whose power is far beyond the alchemy of which any chemist ever dreamed. It is Love that can set circling wings about the hardest lot; that can rob pain of its anguish and poverty of its sting; that can glorify the meanest thing on earth and set it among the stars. Love is the Philosopher's Stone that gives the courage of heroes to just ordinary men and women; that gives to the weak the strength of Samson and to the faltering the endurance to struggle on to the end.

Love is the Philosopher's Stone that works miracles. Look at some of them and marvel.

Watch a mother with a sickly little baby. To your eyes it is a hideous and a disgusting object. Its head is big and round and bald. Its neck stringy. Its body puny and weasened. Its eyes are pale and watery. Its mouth gapes like the mouth of a catfish. It cries continually with a peevish, fretful wail that never ceases and that rasps your nerves unendurably. It is malodorous and unclean in spite of being washed and dressed a dozen times a day.

You look at the ugly little creature, you hear its eternal wail, and you feel that there isn't enough money in the Subtreasury to hire you to take care of it for a week. You look at the mother, worn with fatigue and sleepless nights in which she has walked the floor trying to soothe that pain-wracked little body and hush its cries, and you wonder that she doesn't let it die. You wonder that she has the patience and the courage and the strength to go on with her terrible task of caring for it.

She could not, except that, hidden in her bosom, is the Philosopher's Stone—Love—that makes her see the child, not hideous and loatheome as it is to you, but beautiful and radiant, a creature in whom is bound up every possibility and ambition. The wailing voice is not discord to her ears, but a call sweeter than lover ever made. Her arms never grow weary of their burden, because they are upborne by the mighty arms of Love.

Babies in hospitals die like flies, in spite of all that science can do for them. It is because no hired nurse possesses the Philosopher's Stone of Love.

And behold another miracle.

See the little ordinary, commonplace man who has the little green grocery around the corner. He married young, an ordinary, commonplace girl who has grown middle-aged and fat now, and he has an ordinary, commonplace family of girls and boys.

Early and late this man is at his store. He toils harder than any slave. His life is as monotonous as the swing of the pendulum of a clock. To the store early in the morning, and back home late at night. It never varies, year in nor year out. The only excitement he ever knows is when Bermuda onions drop 25 cents a box.

He is always shabby. He never takes any amusement. He has never had a vacation. You would say that there could not be an existence more utterly drab, and drear, and joyless, and you wonder what he gets out of life that keeps him from taking a header into the river.

Ah, you see, you do not know that he carries in his flabby pockets the Philosopher's Stone of Love that turns the fat, dull wife into a queen of love and beauty, and that changes each pasty-faced child into a little princeling. You would laugh behind your hand at little Mary's picture of a cat. He sees in her a Rosa Bonheur. You would groan with the torture of listening to little Johnnie's piano playing. He hears in it a young Paderewski. You are bored stiff at hearing the smart things that Susie and Tommie say. He could listen to the phonographic record of them a thousand times a day.

Talk about things to live for! Why, he's got everything in the world that there is to live for. And if he works himself to death trying to send wooden-headed boys through college and dress plain-faced girls up into a semblance of beauty, he dies gloriously happy that he has given his children the chances in life that he never had himself.

And behold still another miracle.

The wife of a poor man. She lives in a few shabby rooms, tiny, ill ventilated, unsavory. Everything is ugly and inartistic. The few pieces of furniture are cheap and tawdry. Her own clothes ugly, ill-fitting and shabby.

Hard work has aged her prematurely. She has burnt the roses out of her cheeks over the cook-stove and dimmed the brightness of her eyes by long hours at night with her needle. She toils incessantly at the dreary round of household drudgery that is never ended and always the same, and always there is a child tugging at her skirts and another in her arms. She never has any pleasure, never any amusement. The best of life passes her by on the other side.

She has not even the reward of her husband's tenderness and appreciation, for he takes her devotion without realizing it, as he would the devotion of a dog.

It would be a life of unendurable martyrdom except that the woman carries in her hand the Philosopher's Stone—Love—that gilds the sordidness of her lot; that turns any sort of a hovel that is a home into a palace, and that casts a halo about her husband and children so that she never really sees them as they are, but only as she would have them in her dreams.

Blessed be the Philosopher's Stone—Love—that changes the world and makes it worth while for all of us!

About Mirandy

EVERY reader of the Boston Sunday AMERICAN knows Mirandy and will be glad to learn that a generous and choice assortment of Dorothy Dix's best stories of her most celebrated creation has been collected and printed in a book. The book, which is published by Hearst's International Library Company and sells for a dollar, is entitled simply "Mirandy," and it is packed full of good things. Mirandy, who haven't already made friends with Mirandy, it may be said that the book is one of those that you read with a chuckle and quote afterwards to your friends, for Mirandy's "prognostications" are of the sort of which saws and proverbs are made. Mirandy, in fine, is a colored lady who takes in washing, besides running her family and the Daughters of Zion, and sitting in the amen corner in church, and who "xpressifies" her opinions on every subject from revising the Ten Commandments to the best way of managing husbands, and bringing up a family. And to every topic she brings a fund of primitive humor, a quaint philosophy, and an amount of good, hard horse sense that make her utterances not only deliciously amusing, but illuminating. Just read the chapter of Miranda's philosophy:

"Spry Summer: I takes a trip for Ike's health, because dere ain't nothin' in dis world dat pearlins a man up lak gittin' rid of his wife, even of hit ain't but for two or three weeks, an' I allus notice dat when I gits back home off my vacation, like looks 'bout ten yeahs younger, an' lak he done took de rest cure."

"Dere ain't no way of keepin' a man home of a evenin' lak fillin' him so full dat he can't move. Besides, dare ain't nothin' dat stops flirtatiousness lak fat."

"I ain't never been sparin' of usin' soft soap wid Ike. A man's got to have hit, an' ef his wife don't hand it to him wid a shovel, some odder woman will wid a spoon."

"Any woman dat don't keep her husban' so busy apologisin' to her for his shortcomings dat he ain't got time to notice hers, don't deserve to have one."

"De proof of a husband's affection is de way he treats you, not what he says, an' de test of love after marriage ain't bringin' home vi'lets; hit's bringin' home de pay envelope."

"De trouble wid most women is dat dey treats deir husbands lak reasonable beings, which ain't no way to treat a husband, for husbands ain't nothin' but babies wid beards. You got to 'em some, and spile 'em some, an' spank 'em some, an' shet yo' eyes to deir doings some, an' stuff 'em on what dey laks to eat, an' of you does dat you can mostly keep 'em home—or leastways dey's sho' to come back to hit."

"You believe me when I tells you dat de man what always sees his wife surrounded wid de smell of good cookin' is got dat feelin' business cinched. Why, my ole man like couldn't tell me an' a fried chicken apart. We'se dat much mixed up in his memrances and affections!"

"De reason dat women ain't got no say in de government is because you got to wuk dat votin' machine wid you' spine, an' women ain't got no backbone. All dey's got is a wishbone."
